Section A

1. Read the passage:

Many of us return home after our holidays to brush the sand out of our luggage, water wilted pot plants, and later sort through treasured holiday memories forever. Months after your latest break and those happy snaps, you ask the questions - Where on an e-mail to the relatives? Downloaded onto a compute most of them when they discovered the hard disk was getting too filled with heavy files?

If your household is like mine, the memories of our 2005 summer holiday may well disappear into the void that lies between the material past. You see, our paper photo album ends halfway through 2004. Since then the arrival of the digital camera and the mobile camera phone has meant our photos are 'stored' (on two computers, two phones, the camera itself, in an online di friends). None of the 'photos' has made it onto paper and into the album. And they probably never will.

In fact, techno-challenged people like me fear these new pixel images will never become permanent, and that pictures on screen in albums, whose pages are turned like the books of our lives.

The processing industry once hoped the snap lead to more images being transferred to paper because some households are yet to adjust to the latest forms of photographic display and storage.

The most fundamental way photography has changed is that digital photos are virtually free. A happy snapper can take hundreds of photos of an event, rather than ration the occasion to a dozen composed shots. Digital snappers can become like the National Geographic photographers, who take about 12,600 shots per assignment, knowing only ten will be used.

The photographer, however amateur, also becomes the editor. Once the images are transferred to a computer, they can be tampered with. Don't like the person in the shot? Get rid of him. Want to make London look sunny? Click on the blue sky. A double chin? Deft shading will fix that.

The photo, once a candid image and a priceless memory, becomes something that's cheaply taken, easily discarded, and endlessly manipulated.

It's easy to see why the photo processing industry is having trouble coming to terms with the new century of snappers. An industry whose slogan was the preservation of priceless family memories has found itself in a virtually disposable world.

For more than a century, memories of who we were and where we've come from have been refreshed by regularly turning the pages of our photographic chronology. Future generations will have a different grab on their history. A series of mouse clicks will take through a kaleidoscope of images of life caught on the run.

On the basis of your understanding of the above passage, answer ANY TEN questions from the eleven given below:

- i. Why, in the present times, none of the 'photos' makes it to the paper or album?
 - a. They are "stored" in electronic devices

2. Read the passage:

1. Every time a child takes a soft drink, he's laying the groundwork for dangerous bone disease. No, fizzy and sugary drinks don't cause osteoporosis. But, because they are often a substitute for a glass of milk, kids are not getting the calcium and vitamin D they need to build a strong skeleton. Many of them also lead a sedentary lifestyle, so they aren't getting the bone-building benefits for vigorous exercise either. These children aren't just in jeopardy for brittle bones and fractures decades down the road. They could be at risk of osteoporosis at a younger age than ever before.
2. The Indian Society for Bone and Mineral Research, a body of osteoporosis experts is trying to spread awareness about this bone crippling disease. Osteoporosis starts in childhood but has consequences later in life. The condition causes bones to become riddled with holes, like the framework of a house that's been attacked by termites. That can lead to broken bones, which in turn can cause deformity, chronic pain, or disability. Osteoporosis can be fatal; up to 25 percent of older people who suffer a broken hip die within a year, Osteoporosis isn't just your grandmother's health threat. Although it strikes over 50 million women in India, it also menaces over 12 million men; Osteoporosis causes loss of height, pain in joints and back, fractures, and fear of fractures, and can be very depressing, so we must adopt preventive measures, to save millions of people.
3. There is a new medical understanding of the best ways to protect ourselves and our children, "Simple lifestyle changes and nutrition will help save your bones," says Dr, Mittal, To get us moving in the right direction, he says, "It's never too late to adopt bone-friendly habits - exercise, get enough sunlight, and have adequate calcium, This way, we can keep our bones healthy and prevent osteoporosis."

On the basis of your understanding of the above passage, answer ANY TEN questions from the eleven given below:

- i. What happens when a child drink's soft drinks?
 - a. He becomes fat
 - b. He becomes lazy and inactive
 - c. He's becoming prone to bone diseases

WRITING SECTION

Notice

WHAT IS A NOTICE?

A notice is a written or printed news announcement or information. A notice may contain news/information about something that has happened or is likely to happen. It may be a formal announcement of public importance or an advance warning meant for compliance and information.

A notice can be about a meeting, an event, an excursion/historical trip/a picnic, lost and found, change of name/address/uniform/timings/venue etc. Notices are effective means of disseminating information related to different issues or occasions. They reach to a large number of persons in a short time. Hence a notice is written in simple and formal language. It is clear, brief and to the point.

Points to remember

- Stick to the specified word limit.
- You need to write the word NOTICE at the top.
- Do not forget to mention the Name and Place of the school, or organization or office that is issuing the notice.
- An appropriate heading is required.
- Include the date of issuing the notice.
- State the target group clearly (for whom the notice is to be displayed).
- Write the purpose of the notice.
- Mention other relevant details like date, venue and time.
- State that needs to be contacted for extra information.
- The signature, name and designation of the person who is issuing the notice should be there.

Format

Since notices are a formal document it should follow a structure or a format. Keep in mind there is no one correct rigid format. Different formats used by different people/organizations can show some variations. But it is ideal to follow a somewhat similar format for ease of understanding and uniformity. Let us look at the most used format of notices.

1. Name of Issuing Organization/Authority: Right at the very top, you print the name of the person or company that is issuing the said notices. This will help the reader identify the notices as important or unimportant to him.
2. Title: When writing notices we mention a title "NOTICE" at the top. This helps draw attention to the document. Notices are generally posted at a public place or published in newspapers. It is important that they do not get lost in a sea of information. So a bold title clearly mentioned helps draw the attention.

3. Date: After the title to the left-hand side we print the date on which the notices have been published. Since this is a formal document date is an important aspect of it since these documents stay on record.
4. Heading: Then we move on to an appropriate heading to the notices. This heading should make abundantly clear the purpose of the notices.
5. Body: After the heading, we write the brief and to the point body of the notice. The main content of the notice features in the body.
6. Writer's Name: At the end of the notices we write the name and designation of the notice-writer. The notices have to also be signed by the same person to lend it authority and validity.

NAME OF THE ISSUING AGENCY/AUTHORITY

Date

Body

(Date/Time/Duration/Place/Venue)

Authorized Signatory

(Name, Designation and Signature)

Content

Notices should cover some important points that are to be communicated to the readers. Let us summarize the five points that the content of the notice will cover, the five W's

1. What: What is the notice about? The notice should be clear about what is going to happen (event), or what has already happened (occasion). This is the crux of the message and should be written clearly. There should not be any ambiguity.
2. Where: If the notice is about an event, then the location of such an event must be written clearly. The venue or the location are important details, so make sure to include this in the notice.

3. When: This is the time and the date of the event or meeting. If possible the duration of the event should also be mentioned to people can schedule their time accordingly.
4. Who: This will be who the notice is addressed to. Who all are suppose to adhere to the notice should be clearly mentioned to avoid confusion.
5. Whom: And final detail should be whom to contact or get in touch with. This mentions who the appropriate authority is to contact.

Advertisement

Advertising is a type of communication whereby people promote or persuade customers to utilize their services. There are two types of advertisements:

1. Classified advertisements

2. Display advertisements (Commercial Advertisement)

Classified ads will be our subject in this article. Classified ads are called CLASSIFIED ADS because they are CLASSIFIED into different type of categories depending on their functions.

Classified advertisements

Classified advertisements are advertisements used by the general masses to promote or use services. They are generally text-based ads where newspaper agencies generally charge on the number of words used. So, you can very well imagine that there is no place for precise English sentences here and the only concern is to get things noticed with as minimum words as possible.

Tips for writing Classified Advertisement

1. When you're writing an advertisement, every word counts. Being too vague or wordy will cause people to skim your advertisement instead of pausing to read it, so the same writing tenets apply no matter what type of advertisement you're writing.
2. It should begin with a heading in bold or upper case letters.
3. The language should be according to the audience we are referring to. For example- If you want to sell something to the youngsters, the words chosen shall be good enough to attract them.
4. Do not use the same descriptive characteristics for every type of advertisement. For example- In Situation Wanted case, calling for receptionist applications, one must use words that are indicative of the personality and communication skills you are looking for. On the other hand, for hiring a tech executive, it is imperative you ask for skills limited to the IT department.
5. Do not make full sentences. The prescribed limit is 50 words and in order to make your advertisement loaded with information about the topic, you have to manage your words carefully.
6. Always add contact details in the end either in the form of contact no., email id or both. They are generally given in the question.
7. Remember, nowhere in the answer you are required to mention your own personal details.
8. It should always be in a box made with sharpened pencil.
9. It should be neat and clean with good presentation.
10. Practice a lot of advertisements because, "Practice makes the man (or woman, for that matter) perfect" .

Word Limit

Classified ads should be very well covered in a range of around 50 words. Marks will be deducted if the student jumps the word limit. So exercise caution in this regard.

There are several type of classified ads, which are as follows:

1. Situation vacant
2. To-let
3. Sale and Purchase of Property/Vehicles/Goods
4. Education institutions promotion

5. Missing persons
6. Tour and Travels

Now let's highlight what to include in each type of classified ad.

1. Situation Vacant types

1. Always begin with WANTED or REQUIRED
2. Name of the organization must be always present
3. Number of vacancies and the post for which advertised should be clearly stated.
4. The age and gender of the candidate required.
5. Qualification and requisite experience needed for the post.

Invitation & Reply

Invitations form an important part of social dealings. An invitation is a request to an individual to come or go somewhere, or to do something. Invitations can be both formal as well as informal.

FORMAL INVITATIONS

Main Characteristics:

1. A formal invitation is normally a single sentence presentation in third person.
2. Formal invitations are generally printed invitation cards. We use them to invite guests on some auspicious occasion like birthdays, weddings, inauguration of shops, houses, etc.
3. The invitation answers the questions who, whom, when, where, what time and for what, i.e.,
 1. the occasion
 2. name(s) of the invitee
 3. name(s) of the host
 4. date, time and venue
4. The other details include name, designation and address of the organiser, sponsor or host or the name(s) of the chief guest or special invitees, in case of an official invitation.
5. Printed formal invitations don't include the name of the addressee.
6. Invitations to VIP to preside over a function do carry the name of VIP prominently.
7. Length as per CBSE guidelines is limited to 50 words.

INFORMAL INVITATIONS

Main Characteristics:

Informal invitations are ordinary personal letters. These letters are written to relatives, friends and acquaintances.

1. These letters are first/second person presentations.
2. Personal feelings and emotions find an expression.
3. The writer's address is given in the usual place.
4. The salutation is usually "Dear" plus "Name".
5. The date of writing is given, but the year is generally omitted.
6. The style and tone are relaxed and informal.
7. Different tenses are used as the sense demands.
8. The complimentary close is: Yours sincerely'.

WRITING REPLIES

(RESPONDING TO FORMAL AND INFORMAL INVITATIONS)

A formal reply is short, brief and to the point. It must always be pleasant. Even while declining the invitation or expressing inability to attend one must be polite and courteous. Formal replies demand a formal tone and treatment. There is no room for unnecessary details. An informal reply or private letter may, however, express personal feelings or desires in an intimate style and informal tone.

Main characteristics:

(a) Formal Replies

- Acknowledge the invitation.
- Express thanks in third person.
- Mention acceptance/regret.
- Specify the reason for refusal.
- Be brief and specific.
- Be formal in tone and treatment.
- Do not exceed the word limit (usually 50 words).

(b) Informal Replies

- Acknowledge the invitation in first person.
- Use second person for the sender of invitation.
- Mention acceptance/regret.
- Specify the reason in case of refusal.
- Use warm and simple language.
- Do not exceed the word limit (usually 50 words).

Letter-Writing

Letter-Writing is an essential channel of communication between people who are geographically distant from one another. In earlier times, when the telephone and email were not available, the only means of communication between people was through letters. It is a skill that has to be developed.

In general, there are two types of letters: formal, that are written to convey official business and information and informal, which are personal letters to communicate with friends and family.

Formal Letters

Let us now examine some of the steps in writing formal letters.

1. (i) Introducing oneself if it is the first time you are writing
(ii) Referring to an earlier letter if you are responding to it.
2. Stating the purpose of the letter
3. (i) Stating action/information required from the addressee
(ii) Explaining action taken/supplying information
4. (i) Urging action to be taken
(ii) Offering assistance in future

This is the basic structure of a letter. It has to be modified according to the purpose for which it is written, and the person to whom it is addressed.

When you write a letter, you should keep in mind the following points.

1. Purpose

2. Person to whom it is addressed
3. The tone you should adopt
4. Completeness of the message
5. Action required
6. Conciseness of expression

A letter has a typical format:

1. Name and address of the sender –
2. Name and address of the addressee
3. Date
4. Mode of address or salutation
 - (i) Dear Sir/Madam (when you are writing to a total stranger whom you do not know at all).
 - (ii) Dear Mr/Ms/Dr/Professor + Surname as in Dear Dr Sinha, (when it is a formal relationship with the addressee and the writer does not know him or her personally).
 - (iii) Dear Sujata (when the writer knows the addressee personally, and the two share a semi-formal relationship).
5. Reference to previous correspondence, if any. Most official letters carry a subject line just above the salutation. This is for quick reference to the subject.
6. Content of letter – The content of the letter begins on the next line and is arranged in two or three paragraphs.
7. Complimentary close and signature – Letters usually end politely with the following phrases: Thank you, With regards, With best wishes, Hope to see you soon, Hope to receive an early reply etc. The complimentary close is followed by ‘Yours sincerely/ Yours truly’, and the writer’s signature in the next line.

GUIDELINES

Writing Good Business/Official Letters

1. Be brief, clear, concise and to the point.
2. Use a proper layout/format for these formal letters. The layout may be in block format or indented format (as in informal letters).
3. Use of punctuation marks is adopted in the indented form but it is dispensed with in the block format.
4. Do not mix the two formats. It would be better for you to practise and

- follow the block format which is in vogue after introduction of computers.
5. Convey facts briefly but impressively. Indicate the theme in the initial para of the body of the letter. Develop your points in the middle paragraph and conclude/give suggestions in the final part of the body of the letter.
 6. Use simple and direct language. Avoid the use of long and high sounding words and ambiguous constructions.
 7. Be courteous. Even while lodging a complaint or criticising, you should be polite and charming.
 8. Remember the following points about block format:
 1. There is no indentation.
 2. Each block begins with the margin on left hand side.
 3. Extra space should be left between different sections and paragraphs.
 4. Omit punctuation marks in address, date or salutation. In case you put a comma in the address, use it throughout. Do not mix the two systems.

9. Golden Rule: Always use
- (a) suitable format
 - (b) well-organised content
 - (c) appropriate language

Study the formats given below, observe their use in solved examples and adopt them in the exercises given for practice:

APPLICATION FOR JOB

The application for a job may be written with or without a bio-data. In case it is written without a bio-data, the main body of the letter should contain the following information :

1. Personal information, e.g. age, health, sex etc.
2. Educational / professional qualifications
3. Experience / suitability for the job.

The format is the same as that of an official letter.

WHAT IS C.V. / BIO-DATA?

The application for a job is sometimes accompanied by a Bio-data of the applicant. The Bio-data is also called resume or curriculum-vitae (C.V.). It contains full information about the candidate pertaining to the job requirement.

The letter with bio-data will have the bio-data as an enclosure. The relevant information will be included under the heading 'Bio-Data'. The covering letter will be a formal official letter having the same kind of format, language and style. The following features must be mentioned in the bio-data:

FORMAT

Marks may be deducted for not using proper layout. Layout should include date, receiver’s designation and address, salutation, subject, complimentary close and designation of writer. However, no marks are awarded for format alone if there is no content or if the content is wrong.

CONTENT

It includes your creativity in presenting ideas which are relevant to the topic of the letter. The content of the letter must be well-organised to ensure clarity and effective communication. The content is divided into three main parts:

1. Introductory part

2. Main part

3. Concluding remarks

- The introductory paragraph introduces the theme.
- The main part deals with the problem/issue. It is the real content of the letter.
- The closing part of the body gives conclusions or offers suggestions.

Some

- Be brief and to the point
- Mention specific issues only
- Tone : polite but formal

Tips:

4. In letters to editors state the problem clearly. Try to present both sides of the picture. In case of a discursive topic or one requiring argumentative presentation, give the pros and cons of the situation. Always offer useful suggestions to overcome the problem.

EXPRESSION

(a) Fluency is your ability to present your ideas in a coherent and organised way. Before answering in the 'fair', you must prepare a rough draft and jot down your ideas. You may follow the process detailed below:

- Think about the letter/topic.
- Collect all the ideas and put them down roughly.
- Organise the ideas by putting common ideas together.
- Arrange them sequentially.
- End on a positive note.

(b) Accuracy involves grammatical correctness as well as structuring of sentences. Your effort should not be to use complex, long and unwieldy sentences, but to present your content in simple, straightforward language.

Note the following points about the use of language:

(a) Business/Official Letters :

1. simple and direct
2. formal tone
3. straightforward manner

(b) Letters to Editors :

1. greater flexibility
2. suitable to subject/content
3. formal, direct and pointed

Sir,

We purchased a frost-free B.L.P. Refrigerator of 265 litres from you about six months back, vide your Receipt No. C-1265 dated 10 January, 20XX. You provided us a warranty letter for two years against any technical fault. Having used it for about a month, we now find that the freezing section of the refrigerator is not working properly. We are unable to get even a single eatable fresh when kept in it. The summer season is in full swing and we are feeling great inconvenience due to our defective refrigerator. Under these circumstances, it is requested that the defective refrigerator may please be replaced at your earliest in order to stop further inconvenience to us. It will be appreciated if the new set is installed after proper testing.

Thanking you.

Sub : Arrangements to Store Rain Water
Sir,

The residents of Vasant Vihar have faced an acute shortage of water during summer season. This year was exceptionally hot and a lot of water was needed for quenching thirst, bathing, cooking and other basic household needs like washing clothes, utensils etc. The shortage of water caused a lot of problems and turned people's life to a virtual hell. The rainy season is at hand. You are requested to make arrangements to store rain water and utilise it during the lean periods of water supply. Moreover, awareness should be created among the people, by distributing pamphlets, advertisements in newspaper, T.V. etc. to save water. Practical demonstrations of 'Rain Harvesting' will prove an educative step. Posters on 'Water is Precious' and 'Water is Life' may be displayed at important places. I hope my suggestions will find favour with you.

Informal Letters

These are the letters written to friends, relatives and any associate with whom we share a friendly and close relationship. These can be written according to one's style and convenience. The general structure followed in any informal letter is writing the name of the sender and the name of the person addressed to, the body of the letter and then closing salutations. The greetings and salutations can be based on the kind of relationship you share.

Dear Mira

How have you been? I hope my letter finds you in best of health and spirits. It has been almost a month I transferred to the boarding school. I am very happy in my new school. The classes and dormitories are very spacious. There are well equipped science laboratories and a library with a great collection of books. The school has amazing sports facilities such as swimming pool, horse riding track and archery range.

I believe my life here will be interesting and enjoyable. Although I have made many new friends, I still miss you and the other friends. Please, pay my regards to your parents.

It's been a while since I've heard from you. Where have you been? I hope this letter finds you in the best of your health.

As summers are approaching, I was thinking if we could spend the summer break together at my place in Mumbai. I will introduce you to all my friends and close relatives. I will give you a city tour as well. We will spend some quality time in the afternoons near the sea shore. To add cherry on the cake, the weather here is very pleasant during those days due to sea winds.

I am excited even at the thought of you and I spending the summer together after so long. I have to tell you a lot of things and expect the same from you.

Give my regards to aunty and uncle!

Hope to see you soon.

Article Writing

Article Writing is usually considered as one of the easy and popular write-ups. However, if not framed rightly it can come out as a bad attempt. Students may be asked to write a composition based on a verbal/visual output (in about 150-200 words). Output may be descriptive or argumentative in nature. It shall be in the form of an article for a newspaper or a school magazine. The 'Verbal input' may include broad hints, a short outline or only a suggested beginning. The 'Visual input' may be in the form of a figure, a diagram, a chart or a cartoon. The aim of inserting an input is two-fold:

1. to lay down a general outline for the development of the article, and
2. to discourage cramming. The students are expected to express their own views or ideas on a particular topic or issue in their own language.

Format of an Article

The format of an article is divided into 3 parts and they are listed below:

- Part 1 – Heading
- Part 2 – Byline
- Part 3 – Body

Part 1 – Heading – The heading of the article should be engaging and it should not exceed more than 5 to 6 words. Make sure your heading doesn't have any spelling mistakes or grammar errors. Don't use unnecessary punctuation marks in the heading. Heading carries 1 mark in Article Writing.

Part 2 – Byline – Byline is nothing but the name of the person who is writing the article. The name of the person will be generally given in the question paper itself. If the name of the person is not given in the article, then write details on your own.

Tip – Candidates are not supposed to mention any of their personal details while attempting the answers in the exam.

Part 3 – Body

The body is the main part of article writing which carries more weightage of marks. Generally, the body of the article consist of at least 3 to 4 paragraphs.

Paragraph 1 – Paragraph 1 is the introduction paragraph. Paragraph 1 should be accurate. Precisely explain what the article is talking about. Try giving some quotations or frightful facts to excite the interest of the readers. Keep the language simple.

Paragraph 2 & 3– Paragraph 2 and 3 must come with a complete analysis of the subject matter in question. Paragraph 2 & 3 must include the following factors:

- Types – Here the writer must analyze and explain what are the different types of problems that are existing. If any type of problem exists, they should mention here.
- Current Scenario – Here the writer must explain the current situation of the problem. What are the actions taken to correct them. This may include advantages or disadvantages of the problem etc.,
- Cause and Effect Relationship – Develop the cause and effect relationship by supporting it with facts or data. Here writer may also write the consequences.

Paragraph 3 & 4 – Paragraph 3 or 4 is commonly known as the conclusion paragraph. It is important to conclude the article what you've started. Never leave an article open-ended. The conclusion paragraph should speak about the problems raised and what are actions taken for the betterment of the problem. Paragraph 3 & 4 should be simple and precise.

While writing an article keep the following points in mind:

1. Study carefully the hints/points given in the 'Verbal input'.
2. Arrange the hints given in the order you want to develop them for the article.
3. You may have some new ideas or views about the issue. Note down your ideas. Organise them properly.
4. Coordinate your ideas with the given hints. Now arrange them in a logical order.
5. Put your ideas under different main headings.
6. Now add sub-points to the main point.
7. Develop each point in a systematic or logical manner.
8. Substantiate your argument if you are writing on a debatable point.

9. Introduce the topic, main idea or main issue in the first few sentences.
10. Your article must end with your conclusion on the topic or issue.

Example

By 2050, India will be amongst the countries which will face acute water shortage. You are highly alarmed and terrified of the future world without water. So, write an article on “Save water- are we doing enough?” for the local daily in 150-200 words. (SOURCE- SAMPLE QUESTION PAPER 2018-19)

Answer:

SAVE WATER- ARE WE DOING ENOUGH?
(By – XXX)

Paragraph 1 –

Many people are living with less water than they need, whether in the world's most prosperous cities or in its bountiful agricultural heartlands. Droughts have also become more frequent, more severe, and affecting more people around the world. As many as four billion people already live in regions that experience severe water stress for at least one month of the year. With populations rising, these stresses will only mount.

Paragraph 2 –

Water is the precious gift of God on earth. Life exists on earth because of the availability of water. Itself being tasteless, odourless and colourless, it adds taste, colour and nice smell in the life of living beings on the Earth.

Paragraph 3 –

Here are different methods we can follow to save clean drinking water and deal with the water scarcity. Rainwater harvesting is one of the most effective and suitable method among save water techniques.

Conclusion –

Aforestation is also a good method as it reduces surface runoff and recharges the groundwater. It promotes underground water conservation. By practising such methods we can conserve more water naturally and ensure the availability of it for future generations. We should take a pledge and make it a lifelong motto to preserve water because, “If you conserve water, it means you conserve life.”

Poem 1 My Mother At Sixty Six

by- Kamala Das

About the Author

Kamala Das (1934—2009) is one of the most unconventional, free-spirited, and non-conformist poets of Kerala. In India's literary sky, she dazzles like a bright star inspiring fearlessness and defiance among young writers who venture to write on atypical ideas. She wrote short stories and poems both in Malayalam and English. For some time she wrote as a columnist on diverse topics, but her main focus was the suffering of women, childcare woes, and the burden of orthodoxy which made her a rebel. For her defiant, non-conformist writing, she invited derision and wrath from the feudalistic Brahmin class, but the diatribes made her more defiant. In frankness, and fearlessness, there is no Indian writer of equal stature.

This poem 'My mother at sixty six' is one of her best short poems that exudes empathy and love..

Introduction

In the poem "My Mother at Sixty-Six," the Indian poet Kamla Das expresses her love towards her mother. She describes her love attachment for her mother who is aging day by day. She realized that her mother has turned pale and old. The realization of losing her other one day started to hurt the poet but she was not able to express her feelings to her. When she went inside the airport she greeted her goodbye and smiled at her continuously so as to hide her feeling of losing her mother one day. The smile is also a positive feeling which the poet wants to express at the end of the poem. She wants to say goodbye to her mother with a smile so that they can meet again in the future. The poet uses the imagery of a "corpse" to signify the aging of her mother. The line which denotes the aging of the mother in the poem is: "her face ashen like that of a corpse"

The poet compared the scene inside the car with the activities going on outside in the poem "My Mother at Sixty-six." The poet analyzes her mother's aging and growing old and then when she looks outside she sees the young trees. These trees looked very happy and fresh and the moving car was leaving them behind. This highlights the issue that youth and age have to decline someday.

Theme

My Mother at sixty six is a poem by Kamala Das is based on the theme of universal truth of advancing age, emotions and the fear of loss and separation. The poet is feeling guilty of not being able to stay with her mother in her old age. The poet uses simile and contrast as the poetic device to express her feeling towards her mother.

Summary & Explanation

My Mother at Sixty Six by Kamala Das is a moving poem. In this she laments her mother's ageing and feels extremely sad at the time her separation from her ageing mother at the airport. In the car, she notices that her mother had grown terribly old and that the two would not probably meet again. She compares her mother with a late winter's moon. She pretends to be happy to make her mother happy and departs with a heavy heart.

In this poem, Kamala Das presents a daughter's anguish (pain) as she is leaving her ageing mother behind her for a while. She is going to board a flight and is not sure about her timely return in case something happened to her mother.

Lines 1 – 4:

Driving from my parent's home to Cochin last Friday morning, I saw my mother, beside me,

In these lines, the poet recalls a trip back to Cochin from her holiday in her parents' house the previous week. It was a Friday, and that morning, she was driving with her mother next to her on the front seat.

Lines 5 – 10:

doze, open mouthed, her face ashen like that of a corpse and realised with pain that she was as old as she looked but soon put that thought away, and

In these lines, the poet says that she was observing her mother who had fallen asleep on the front seat with her mouth slightly open. Her mother's face was pale, and it reminded her of the nearly white faces of dead bodies. It is then that she comes to realize that her mother was not young any longer, and that her appearance had caught up with her age. This was very hard for the poet to accept, and so she was determined to focus her attention on something else.

Lines 11 – 15:

looked out at Young Trees sprinting, the merry children spilling out of their homes, but after the airport's security check, standing a few yards away, I looked again at her, wan, pale

In these lines, the poet says that she turned away from her aging mother and decided to look outside the windows of the car in which she was driving. Outside, her eyes fell on the trees that the vehicle was passing by. The car was moving so fast that by way of relative motion, it seemed to the poet that all the trees she could see were also running at full speed past her. It seemed that those trees must have been quite youthful if they had the energy to move at such a fast pace. The poet's eyes also fell on the children who were coming out of their houses, brimming over with their excitement to get outside. The poet passed all these sights and reached the airport. Till then, her mind was distracted by the sights. However, after the security check, she was standing a short distance away from her mother and again she chanced to notice the old woman. Just as before, her mother appeared very pale and insipid.

as a late winter's moon and felt that old familiar ache, my childhood's fear, but all I said was, see you soon, Amma, all I did was smile and smile and smile.....

In these lines, the poet compares her mother's face with the sight of the moon on a night towards the end of winter. This made her recall the thing she had been most afraid of during her childhood – the fear that her mother would die one day. This was a fear that had plagued her many times before, and it was plaguing her again now. However, she did not let that fear show itself on her face. Instead she put up a brave face and waved goodbye to her mother. She assured her mother that they would be seeing each other again soon, and all the while, even though she was in great agony, the smile never left her face.

Set 1

Answer. (a) The poet drove away the painful thought of the distressing reality that her mother was getting old and she might die anytime. (b) When she looked out of the car, she saw young trees on the roadside, which appeared to be moving. She also saw a group of children, merrily rushing out of their homes to play. (c) As the poet passed through security check at the airport and happened to look at her mother, she was again haunted by the same fear of losing her to death. This shows that the joyful scene earlier didn't help drive away the painful thought from her mind. (d) The merry children are symbolic of the exuberance of youth. The energetic and lively children present a contrast to the poet's mother who has grown old and pale.

Answer. (a) The poet put away the thought of the distressing reality of her mother getting old and of her impending death. (b) The 'sprinting trees' signify time that has passed at a fast pace. (c) The merry children epitomise bubbly youth. They represent the exuberance and liveliness of young age. (d) The poet makes use of these images to emphasise the contrast between old age and youth.

Answer. (a) The poet Kamala Das looked out at young trees. (b) Seeing her aged mother, she felt insecure about the fact that she might be separated from her mother. The poet was also feeling guilty for neglecting her. She wondered if she would see her mother alive next time. However, she soon put these thoughts away. (c) The young sprinting trees symbolise happiness, strength and vigour which are the characteristics of youth in contrast to the dullness of old age.

(d) As the poet looked outside the window of her moving car, the trees appeared to be moving fast in the opposite direction. So, they are described as sprinting.

(a) What was the childhood fear that now troubled the poet?

(b) What do the poet's parting words suggest?

(c) Why did the poet smile and smile?

(d) Explain, "that old familiar ache."

Answer. (a) As a child the poet was insecure about losing her mother and the same fear has come again now when her mother has grown old.

(b) The poet, while parting, smiled and said to her mother that she would see her soon. This expression of her suggests that though she was aware that her mother was quite old and weak, yet she could not do anything about it. She could not even communicate her true feelings to her mother.

(c) The poet smiled and smiled only because she wanted to hide her fears from her mother. She was reassuring herself and also her mother that they would meet again.

(d) "That old familiar ache" refers to the agony and pain of separation from her mother that the poet felt in her childhood, as she feared that she might lose her mother.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks, 30-40 Words)

1. How does Kamala Das try to put away the thoughts of her ageing mother?

Answer. Kamala Das finds the thoughts of her ageing mother very painful and disturbing. It is hard for her to accept the fact of her mother growing old, as it brings back to her mind her childhood fear of losing her mother. She makes a deliberate effort to drive or put away such thoughts by looking out of the moving car, at the trees 'sprinting' and the joyful young children rushing out of their homes.

2. What was the poet's childhood fear?
or

What were Kamala Das, fears as a child? Why do they surface when she is going to the airport?

Answer. As a child Kamala Das was insecure about losing her mother just as all young children often are. The same feelings are evoked inside her while she is on the way to the airport, as she sees her mother's pale face, which is a sign of her old age and impending death.

3. What do the parting words of Kamala Das and her smile signify?
or

What do the parting words of the poet and her smile signify?

Answer. The poet's parting words and her smile are a facade to hide her feelings of insecurity. The pale and senile appearance of her mother brings back her childhood fear of losing her mother. She can definitely experience the pangs of separation, yet she bids her farewell in a pleasant manner. She reassures her mother that all will be well and they would meet again.

4. Why has the poet's mother been compared to the "late winter's moon"?
or

Why has Kamala Das compared her mother to a "late winter's moon"?

Answer. The poet has used this simile as 'the late winter's moon' looks too hazy and lacks brightness and lustre. Similarly, the mother, who is now sixty-six, is pale and has a shrunken and ashen face. She is devoid of the effervescence and exhilaration of youth.

5. Why are the young trees described as 'sprinting'?

Answer. The poet is travelling in a speeding car and the roadside trees seem speeding past or sprinting in the opposite direction. The poet has contrasted the 'young trees' which are moving fast to her mother, who is old and slow.

6. What were the poet's feelings at the airport? How did she hide them?

Answer. The poet was torn apart by the feeling whether she would see her mother alive the next time or not. She hid her feelings by smiling reassuringly at her mother.

7. What do the parting words of the poet Kamala Das to her mother signify?

Answer. The parting words of Kamala Das to her mother signify her anxiety and fear about her mother's frail health. They also express the hope that her mother would survive till they meet again. .

8. Why has the poet brought in the image of the merry children spilling out of their homes?

Answer. The young children spilling out of their homes represent the vigour of youth. They are in complete contrast to the poet's mother. Perhaps the poet has used the image to bring out the pangs of old age.

An Elementary School Classroom in a Slum

An Elementary School Classroom in a Slum is a beautifully penned down poem by Stephen Spender that exposes the glaring gaps and marginalisation that occurs ever so often in our societies. Spender is publicly a scrupulous objector and a socialist. The poet aims to portray the conditions of the youngsters residing in the slum. The poet compares the conditions of the "haves" (Privileged children) and the "have-nots" (Underprivileged children of slum).

About the poet

Stephen Spender (1909-1995) was a poet and English essayist. Spender had keen interest in politics and so, he declared himself as socialist and pacifist. His work concentrated on themes of social injustice and the class struggle.

Rhyme scheme of the poem

The poem has been written in free verse. It does not have rhyme scheme.

Theme

In this poem, Stephen Spender deals with the theme of social injustice and class inequalities. He presents the theme by talking of two different and incompatible worlds. The world of the rich and the civilized has nothing to do with the world of narrow lanes and cramped holes. The gap between these two worlds highlights social disparities and class inequalities.

Central Idea

Stephen Spender has presented a true picture of the life of the school children living in the slum of Tyrolean Valley of Austrian Alpine Province. The children are in a very miserable condition due to their poverty and illiteracy. They are depressed. Their pale faces express sadness. They look lean, skinny and bonny. They are like rootless weeds which can't resist anything for their existence. They are physically very weak and undernourished. Spender voices his concern for these children who live all their life in slums and have no opportunity to enjoy the real blessings of life. He makes a frantic appeal to the educated and affluent sections of the society to better the lot of the slum children through education. It will remove social injustice and class inequality.

Poem and Explanation

Stanza – 1

Far far from gusty waves these children's faces.
Like rootless weeds, the hair torn round their pallor:
The tall girl with her weighed-down head. The paper seeming Boy, with rat's eyes. The stunted, unlucky heir
Of twisted bones, reciting a father's gnarled disease,
His lesson, from his desk. At back of the dim class
One unnoted, sweet and young. His eyes live in a dream,
Of squirrel's game, in tree room, other than this.

Word meaning

Gusty waves: breezy winds

Pallor: pale, dull face

Stunted: not fully grown due to malnutrition

Gnarled: Knotted, rough weeds: unwanted plants that grow on their own

Paper seeming boy: Very thin boy, as thin as a sheet of paper

heir: Successor

The poem describes an elementary school class room in a slum. These slum children look very pathetic. Their faces are pale and reflect sadness. They are 'like rootless weeds' as they lack proper nutrition. Moreover, they are unwanted plants which grow on their own without being cared for, totally neglected. The tall girl has a 'weighed – down head' as she is burdened with the load of poverty. In fact she is so subdued and suppressed that her head had bowed down with the burden of her misfortunes. The 'paper thin' – extremely thin boy has 'rat's eyes' because the poor undernourished boy is deprived of all the basic amenities of life. He is timid like a rat and full of anxiety, he searches for food and security. This unfortunate boy suffers from malnutrition and his growth is also 'stunted' not properly developed. He has also inherited from his father 'twisted bones' – bent and distorted bones. He has inherited the poverty, disease and despair from his parents. His body is also deformed because of the twisted bones which he has inherited. He appears to be as sick as his parents. There is a sweet tender looking student who sits at the back of the class. This boy is different from the others as 'his eyes live' in a dream – he is dreaming and probably thinking about a better future. He is lost in his own world, therefore, not sad like the others. This boy thinks of the 'squirrel's game' (metaphor). He wants to enjoy and play freely like the squirrel in the garden outside. The squirrel climbs trees and hides in their holes. The boy also dreams to be free but he cannot as he must sit in the dull and dreary classroom. In the boys imagination 'tree room' – the hollow in a tree, is full of fun, curiosity and mystery. This is in contrast to the gloomy classroom.

Literary devices:

Simile: children are compared with rootless weed (like rootless weed)

Metaphor: boy is compared with paper as he is thin (paper seeming boy)

Repetition: use of far to stress on the distance

Stanza – 2

On sour cream walls, donations. Shakespeare's head, Cloudless at dawn, civilized dome riding all cities.

Belled, flowery, Tyrolese valley. Open-handed map Awarding the world its world. And yet, for these Children, these windows, not this map, their world,
Where all their future's painted with a fog,
A narrow street sealed in with a lead sky
Far far from rivers, capes, and stars of words.

Word meaning

Sour: unpleasant, here refers to the colour of sour cream -off white or creamish

Donations: things given or received in charity

Dawn: early morning, sunrise civilized dome: here, it means rising sun at the horizon which is in the shape of a dome (semi - circle)

Tyrolese valley: A beautiful ice-free valley in Austria

Sealed: shut or locked lead: here, dark future of kids

Capes: A large piece of land that sticks out into the sea from the coast

The classroom is not well maintained. The pale cream walls which were painted long ago with the help of donations, make the place look more miserable and sad. Probably there is a portrait of Shakespeare on the wall. This is ironical as it is put up in a place where there is no serious teaching. 'Cloudless dawn' and 'civilized dome' suggest the monotonous life in the slum. These slums are surrounded by the civilized city and the children cannot experience the beauty of the sky at dawn and are unaware of it. All around them are concrete structures of the cities. The life in the slum contrasts with the cloudless sky at dawn and concrete structures which override the cities. There is also a picture of a beautiful valley full of sweet fragrant flowers and these children of the slum will never be able to experience this beauty. They are deprived of this beauty as they are condemned to live in the slums amidst garbage. The 'open-handed map' in the classroom contrasts with their world. The world given to us by god is full of all the bounties whereas the world of these slum children is full of poverty and hunger. The world which they see is not the real world. Their world is confined to the narrow, dusty streets of the slum. The map in the classroom gives them hopes and aspirations and motivates them to explore the world but they will never be able to see that world. These children can get the glimpse of the outside world from the windows and it is far beyond their reach. They are far away from nature. These slum children have a bleak and foggy future in store for them. 'Their future is painted with a fog' – it is blurred by hopelessness. There is no hope for the slum children. Instead of the normal blue sky they live under the 'lead sky' – dark and dull, polluted – shows there is no hope for them. The atmosphere hints at their monotonous life and the slum children remain confined throughout their lives confined to the filth and dirt of the narrow slum streets. They are away from the glory of natural beauty of the rivers, mountains, stars etc.

Literary devices:

Metaphor:

1. Walls are described to be dull as sour cream (sour cream walls)
2. The future of the kids is described as limited (Narrow Street sealed with a lead sky)

Assonance: repetition of vowel sound 'e' (Belled, flowery, Tyrolese valley)

Allusion: Reference to well known person or place (Shakespeare's head, Tyrolese valley)

Repetition: 'far' repeated

Stanza 3

Surely, Shakespeare is wicked, the map a bad example,
With ships and sun and love tempting them to steal
For lives that slyly turn in their cramped holes
From fog to endless night? On their slag heap, these children
Wear skins peeped through by bones and spectacles of steel
With mended glass, like bottle bits on stones.
All of their time and space are foggy slum.
So blot their maps with slums as big as doom

Word meaning

Wicked: evil

Tempted: persuade

Slyly: trickily

Cramped: confined

Slag: weak

Mended: repaired

Blot: to mark with a spot

Doom: disaster

The children of the slum are fighting the battle of life unarmed. They are troubled by disease and despair. For them Shakespeare is 'wicked' and 'map' a bad example'. The literary excellence of Shakespeare and the scenic beauty portrayed in the map cannot relieve them from their despair. For these slum children, literary excellence is a far-fetched thing and hence seems wicked. The map on the wall gives them false aspirations as it makes them aware of the beautiful world given by god. The world of these children is confined to the narrow streets of the slums. Therefore, map is 'a bad example'. They feel cheated in being deprived of the thrilling sensations of the sun, the ships, and the emotions of love. The 'ship', 'sun' and 'love' symbolize joy and happiness which these children are deprived of. Their only experience is that of hunger and poverty. To reach out to the world beyond, these children are sometimes tempted to adopt wrong means even stealing to fulfill their dreams. These slum children live in cramped holes, striving and struggling for survival in the small, dirty rooms from 'fog to endless night' – from foggy mornings till long endless nights, trying to meet both ends. The slum children live on 'slag heaps' – piles of waste material. Their world is full of dirt and garbage. These children are very weak and undernourished. They look like skeletons as their bones peep through their thin skin.

They wear 'spectacles of steel with mended glass' – discarded spectacles by the rich, mended (repaired) and worn. Their life is like 'bottle bits on stones' – shattered and broken like bits of bottle on a stone. They are deprived of even the basic amenities of life. Their world is comprised of the foggy slums where they live nightmares. Slums are the reality for these children, their home, where they spend their life. The maps displayed in their classroom are no reality for them. They cannot locate their slum in that map. It is urgently required to give these slum inhabitants means and opportunities to lead a dignified and civilized life.

Literary devices:

Metaphor: Their homes are very small like holes (cramped holes)

Simile- their repaired spectacles (like bottle bits on stones)

Alliteration: Use of 'f' sound (From fog)

Stanza – 4

Unless, governor, inspector, visitor,
This map becomes their window and these windows
That shut upon their lives like catacombs,
Break O break open till they break the town
And show the children to green fields, and make their world
Run azure on gold sands, and let their tongues
Run naked into books the white and green leaves open History theirs whose language is the sun.

Word meaning

Catacombs: tomb, cemetery

Azure: deep blue

The elementary school in the slum exists for name sake. The infrastructure is poor with hardly any serious teaching. The school springs in activity only when a governor, a school inspector or a visitor comes on a round of the school. The administrative machinery of the school also gears up at that time. Then the map becomes their window from where they can see the world beyond their slums. Since they are confined to the slums, these sights and glimpses are shut upon them as they are deprived of all opportunities and means. Their lives are shut up in the cemeteries of these slums where they slither and slog to make both ends meet. The poet hopes that these children will break free from their morbid life, from the chains of the slums. He appeals to those in power to liberate these children from the miserable slums and enable them to breathe in the fresh, beautiful and healthy environment away from the foggy slums. They should be able to bask in the open green fields and let them run free on the golden sands. Their world should not be confined to the horrendous and gory slums. The poet visualizes freedom for these children. He wants a carefree life where they get economic and social justice, where they have the right to be happy. These slum children should be able to enjoy the fundamental right of education otherwise their lives will be miserable. They should be able to learn not from the books alone but also from the world, the nature around them.

The poet ends on a note of positivity and wants opportunities to be available to these children. The people who strive for knowledge are the ones who create history. The ones who are let free are the ones who will create history. People who outshine others, who glow like the sun, who break free from the constraints of their restricted life are the ones who create history and that of diseases are 'twisted bones,

Literary devices

Metaphor: books and nature are expressed in form of white and green leaves (the white green leaves open)

Anaphora: Use of repeated words in two consecutive lines (Run azure And Run naked)

Summary

The children staying in slums have a life full of struggle and lack hope and optimism. They are far away from the velvety world outside. They lack those amenities which are available to privileged people.. They are as unwanted as the rootless weed. They can only wish for the velvety and comfortable life of the world outside. These children have no hope on their faces. Their faces are tousled and dirty. Their hair is scattered untidily around their pale faces. They lack stability. The tall girl is sitting with her head down because she is depressed and overburdened with poverty. There is a boy who is as lean and thin as paper, his miserable underdeveloped body with eyes bulging out like rat reflects the greed he has felt for an eternity. His growth is blocked, and the body appears underdeveloped and malnourished. He is an unfortunate heir who has inherited the twisted bones of his father. He is not reciting a lesson from his desk but is enumerating the diseases inherited from his father. At the back of that unlit classroom, is a sweet young boy who goes unnoticed. Dreams seem to be alive in his eyes. His eyes have that spark of dreams to be part of that world outside the classroom. He dreams of squirrels playing games in the hollow of the tree. His dreams are of the places other than his repulsive classroom. He is lost in his imagination creating his own fantasy world where he plays like a squirrel in its tree room. He is not interested in the monotonous environment of the classroom.

The poet depicts the critical condition of the pale and dingy yellow walls of the classroom. He compares the colour of the walls to "sour cream". The classroom has a picture of Shakespeare which was probably donated. The poet further compares the gifts given as donations and the picture of Shakespeare hung on the unpleasant creamy walls depicting dejection. To them, they are of no use. Shakespeare and literature have no place in their lives. There is also a picture of a clear sky hung on the classroom walls which depicts dawn and a beautiful Tyrolese valley, which indicates beauty and hope with its bells and colourful flowers representing the world that celebrates civilization, progress and heavenly splendour. There is also a world map hung on the wall which is of no use to them as their world is narrow and stuck in the boundaries of poverty and misery. Their future is shaky, dark and foggy. Their world is confined within the narrow streets of the slum enclosed by the bluish grey sky. They are far away from rivers, seas that resemble adventure, excitement and beauty as well as from the stars that symbolize wisdom that can brighten their future.

The poet feels that Shakespeare is 'wicked' as he is misleading those naïve children through his words portraying the world of ships, sun and love which is not only unreal for them, but it has a negative impact on their minds. He feels that this would instigate them to steal or take unfair means as they desperately make attempts to escape from their cramped holes. Their existence is indeed, very sad. These deprived children are so skinny that it appears that they are 'wearing' skins. The spectacles they are wearing have glass which has been broken and mended. Their entire appearance reflects their misery and deprivation. The poet shows his indignation by suggesting that the maps on the classroom walls should show the reality of their life, it must show the huge slums instead of beautiful scenic graphics.

The poet tries to appease and appeal to the teachers, governor, inspector and visitor to become aware and sensitive and do something to improve the conditions of these deprived children. They must try to align the world and transform their map unlike the map of children with amenities. The poet hopes that the bureaucrats and authorities understand their moral responsibilities and free these deprived ones from traps of their graves (A metaphor for the slum). He wants all the barriers that keep them away from achieving the true education to be broken down. They should be given an opportunity to come out of their narrow and shabby lanes and extend to the blue sky & waves rising over the golden sands. The children must be given the freedom to experience the wholesome bounties of nature's fields. These deprived children must be taught to express themselves freely. He wishes that all distinctions that separate them from merging with the outside world be removed from their lives and that they too may have hope of a better, more secure future.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks, 30-40 words)

Question.1. What change does the poet hope for in the lives of the slum children? Or What does the poet want for the children of the slums?

Answer. The poet wishes for a better life for the children of the slums. They should have access to education because education is the key to prosperity. They should be given countless opportunities to explore the world. They need to break free from the confines of their weak world into a world which should welcome them with open arms. The self-centred attitude of the affluent classes should be broken to relieve the children from all misery.

Question.2. To whom does the poet in the poem, 'An Elementary School Classroom in a Slum' make an appeal? What is his appeal?

Answer. The poet makes an appeal to his readers, especially the educated and well-off people, to help the poor children of the slum come out and get free from their miserable surroundings. His appeal is that these children should be given quality education, because education holds the key to their emancipation.

Question.3. Which words/phrases in the poem, 'An Elementary School Classroom in a Slum' show that the slum children are suffering from acute malnutrition?

Answer. The words/phrases in the poem which show that the slum children are suffering from acute malnutrition are "the hair torn round their pallor", "paper seeming boy", "stunted, unlucky heir of twisted bones" and "wear skins peeped through by bones."

Question.4. The poet says, "And yet, for these children, these windows, not this map, their world." Which world do these children belong to? Which world is inaccessible to them?

Answer. The children belong to the world of poverty and misery in the dingy slum areas. The world of the rich, with all the comforts and luxuries of life, is inaccessible to them.

Question.5. How does the poet describe the classroom walls?

Answer. The walls of the classroom are pale and dirty. They are decorated with the donated picture of Shakespeare, a scene depicting buildings with domes, a world map and beautiful valleys, which stand in sharp contrast to the dingy, dismal and gloomy atmosphere in which these slum children live.

Question.6. What message does Stephen Spender convey through the poem, 'An Elementary School Classroom in a Slum'?

Answer. The poet wants that the children of the slums should get rid of their dismal lives. They should be educated and brought out from their ugly surroundings. He feels that it is the responsibility of the affluent classes to free these poor children from the life of hunger and misery.

Question.7. Why does Stephen Spender say that the pictures and maps in the elementary school classroom are not meaningful?

Answer. The pictures and maps in the school are meaningless for the slum children because they stand in sharp contrast to the dingy, dismal and gloomy atmosphere in which these slum children live. These things have no meaning for those who are deprived of the basic amenities of life.

Question.8. What does the poet wish for the children of the slums?

Answer. The poet wants that the children of the slums should break free from the rut of their dreary existence. They should experience nature at its best, as well as frolic around in a carefree manner. They should be educated and be able to transform themselves.

Question.9. Why does the poet Stephen Spender call the map a bad example?

Answer. The map represents the beautiful and wonderful world outside. However, this world is beyond the reach of the slum children. Their hopes and aspirations are confined to their world of despair and diseases. So Stephen Spender calls the map a bad example.

KEEPING QUIET

About the Poet - Pablo Neruda

Pablo Neruda (1904 – 1973) was the ‘pen name’ and later, ‘legal name’ of this famous Chilean poet – diplomat – politician. He won the Noble prize for literature in the year 1971. He wrote in green ink which was his personal symbol for desire and hope. His writings are simple, wherein lies their beauty.

Originally written in Spanish, the essence of this poem is based on introspection and retrospection. The poet feels that some soul – searching is needed for us to be at peace with ourselves and others.

SUMMARY

The poet talks about the need of silence and quiet introspection and the importance of tranquillity and calmness. He also talks about creating a feeling of mutual understanding among human beings. The poet asks us to keep still and count up to twelve. He also asks us to sit still. For a moment we should not speak any language. We should not move our arms so much. It will be a moment of complete silence without rush or worry. This would be an exotic moment.

Then a sudden strangeness will prevail which we will all enjoy. It will be bliss. The fisherman would not harm the whales on the cold sea. Even the man gathering salt would stop working and look at his hurt hands and reflect at the pain and harm his strenuous task has caused him.

All kinds of wars must be stopped at once. The green wars against the environment, wars with poisonous gases, firearms, must be stopped at once. People who are all the time preparing for wars leaving no survivors behind ought to find time to wear clothes and walk around with their brothers strengthening the message of peace and brotherhood.

At the same time the poet cautions not to confuse stillness with total inactivity. Life is an ongoing process and should not be associated with death. It is to be lived with positive attitude. He does not want us to ruminate over death. But he feels that if for once we do not focus ourselves single - mindedly to keep our lives moving but do some introspection or spend some time in silence doing nothing, we can understand ourselves better and escape from the threatening calls of death.

The earth can teach us a lesson how everything comes to a dead end and comes to life again. In the same manner a quiet introspection can bring all evil thoughts to an end and bring in a new life of peace and tranquillity. Now the poet will count up to twelve and they should keep quiet and he will go. Thus the poem “Keeping Quiet” celebrates the necessity of introspection and the advantage of doing nothing and maintaining silence for some time and in the vast treasure of deep silence all depression will vanish and peace would be attained for one would be with oneself at one’s peaceful best.

- Now the poet will count up to twelve and they should keep quiet and he will go

EXPLANATION OF THE POEM

“Now we will count to twelve and we will all keep still.”

The poet begins with counting twelve urging everyone to be still. He chose ‘twelve’ for several reasons. ‘Twelve’ hints at the twelve hours of a day which rules our life. ‘Twelve’ refers to twelve zodiac signs believed to be the controlling forces of our lives. ‘Twelve’ refers to twelve months of a year. ‘Twelve’ even may be aimed for a preparation for all to be ready to plunge into the state of silence.

Poetic devices

- 1) We will = Alliteration (line 1 and 2)
- 2) Countstill – Antithesis

“For once on the face of the earth, let's not speak in any language;”

The poet here urges everyone to break the barriers of language and unite with one invisible tune i.e. silence. With the word ‘earth’ the poet hints at all the humans living devoid the identity of country creed and caste. Though language is the identity of a country or race, he affirms that humans are more important and the identity of being a human of earth is broader realization.

Poetic devices

- 1) Once on – Alliteration

“let's stop for one second, and not move our arms so much.”

The poet here urges to stop for one second. Here ‘second’ presents the tiniest part of time calculation. He ushers us to keep ourselves off for at least one second from the negative aspects. Here ‘arms’ is with dual meaning. He apparently indicates 'arms' as our hands engaged in several activities and at the same time refers to the weapons we use for destruction.

Poetic device

- 1) Arms – Pun
- 1) Meaning one – hands
- 2) Meaning two – Arms (weapons)

“It would be an exotic moment without rush, without engines;
we would all be together in a sudden strangeness.”

We are always on move. We are all busy in accomplishing our work and go on rushing in our lives. The poet even urged to stop engines (referring industrial works causing harms to environment). The poet urges us to stop our personal activities and stop engines and unite in one tune i.e. silence. The poet declares silence as exotic because this silence will make us blissful, strange and will bring complete equilibrium.

Poetic devices

- 1) Withoutwithout – Repetition
- 2) We would – Alliteration.
- 3) Sudden strangeness – Alliteration

“Fisherman in the cold sea would not harm whales and the man gathering salt would look at his hurt hands.”

‘If we be still, we shall be able to introspect the mistakes and wrongs done. Here fishermen are the representatives of all kinds of tyrants and killers. The poet wants, them to cease their work and realise their mistakes. The salt gatherer is explained as the representative of poor and lower section of the society. They go up to any level to earn their livelihood and often hurt themselves irreparably.

Poetic Devices

- 1) Cold sea – symbolised as polar region
- 2) His hurt hands – Alliteration

“Those who prepare green wars, wars with gas, wars with fire, victories with no survivors, would put on clean clothes and walk about with their brothers in the shade, doing nothing.”

The poet here condemns the people with green wars (biological weapon or creators of pollution) and wars with fire (Atomic war) . They become victorious but with no survivors left. The poet mocks at the victory of those people who get victory over destruction. The poet asks them to leave the path of destruction and join the group of silence. He urges them to put on white (symbolising – purity and serenity) clothes. And walk with others doing nothing (meaning anything negative and doing self introspection)

Poetic devices

- 1) Wars with – Alliteration
- 2) Wars with – Repetition
- 3) Clean clothes – Alliteration

“What I want should not be confused with total inactivity.
Life is what it is about;
I want no truck with death.”

The poet here warns us that his message of silence should not be confused with total inactivity or inertia. He further clears that his message does not have any affinity with death even. His message is aimed at the way of living. He wants us to stop a while and feel the tranquillity so that a positive introspection is done.

“If we were not so single-minded about keeping our lives moving, and for once could do nothing, perhaps a huge silence might interrupt this sadness of never understanding ourselves and of threatening ourselves with death.

Perhaps the earth can teach us as when everything seems dead and later proves to be alive.”

We human beings are single minded. We are always busy in achieving our goals, completing personal responsibilities. And we never stop a while to evaluate ourselves and understand ourselves. We never understand that we shall never be able to come out of these desires and achievements. If we could stop a while, we would have understood the real purpose of our lives and ourselves. Rather we go on with the fear of death calculation how much of our dreams and wishes will be achieved.

Poetic devise

1) We were – Alliteration

“Now I'll count up to twelve and you keep quiet and I will go.”

In conclusion the poet taught us through the example of earth which at one season may look as if dead but comes back with life in another season. Likewise our life will also bear certain meaning when we walk on the right path i.e. introspecting in silence. In the last two lines the poet leaves us to introspect as if he himself has gone through the same.

Poetic device

1) deadalive – Antitheses.

- (c) What do the hurt hands imply?
- (d) How would man and nature benefit in this moment of silence?

Answer.

- (a) In the exotic moment of silence and introspection, fishermen will become conscious of the fact that they are causing harm to the whales. The poet expects this because he feels that at this opportune moment all evil will come to an end.
- (b) The man gathering salt will stop for a while at that quiet moment and look at his hurt hands.

(c) 'Hurt hands' means that human beings are oblivious of the pain they are causing to themselves in the pursuit of amassing more and more comforts. They have no time for themselves.

(d) In this moment of silence, man will not harm nature, and both human beings and nature will get some time to attend to and recover from their wounds.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks, 30-40 words)

Question.1. Which is the exotic moment that the poet refers to in 'Keeping Quiet'?

Answer. The poet refers to the moment of stillness and quietness as an exotic moment. It would be an exotic moment, as such a tranquillity will initiate peace and brotherhood. There would be no movement, no talk, no activity and consequently, no violence.

Question.2. What is the sadness that the poet refers to in the poem 'Keeping Quiet'?

or

What is the sadness that the poet refers to in the poem?

Answer. The poet refers to the sadness which surrounds man due to not having any time for himself, the pain of not understanding what he or his fellow human beings want. He has no time for introspection; as a result, he is unable to analyse his own actions and understand its consequences.

Question.3. Which images in the poem 'Keeping Quiet' show that the poet condemns violence?

Answer. The images of fishermen not harming the whales in the sea and wars leaving behind no survivors to celebrate the victory show that the poet condemns violence. The poet wants the warmongers to change their blood-stained clothes to clean ones. The poet's refusal to have any association or dealing with death also shows that he is not in favour of any form of violence.

Question.4. What symbol from nature does the poet use to prove that keeping quiet is not total inactivity?

Answer. The poet uses nature as a symbol to explain his idea that there can be life under apparent stillness. According to him, keeping quiet is not total inactivity. A seed may appear to be dead and inactive, but one day, the same seed may turn into a fruitful tree.

Question.5. How, according to Neruda, can keeping quiet change our attitude to life?

Answer. Keeping quiet and suspending all our activities for a moment will give us time to introspect and analyse our own actions. We will develop a new understanding of our surroundings and thus change our attitude to life. We will check our destructive ways and try to be more positive and constructive.

Question.6. What are the different kinds of wars mentioned in the poem? What is Neruda's attitude towards these wars?

Answer. The poet has written about wars against humanity and nature. Green wars, wars with poisonous gases and wars with fire are the different kinds of wars mentioned in the poem. Wars do good to no one. Pablo Neruda feels that such wars may bring victory, but there are no survivors. It means that there is heavy loss on both sides.

Question.7. How can suspension of activities help?

Answer. The poet believes that suspension of activities will allow man to introspect, which can help them in analysing their own actions, and in solving many of their problems based on caste, religion or nationality. It will help them develop a new understanding of their surroundings, and thus make them mend their destructive ways.

Question.8. Do you think the poet advocates total inactivity and death?

Answer. No, the poet clearly states that his asking for stillness should not be confused with total inactivity or death. He perceives life to be a continuous process, where man's activities should not lead to destruction of fellow human beings or nature, but should be channelised in a resourceful way.

Question.9. According to the poet, what is it that human beings can learn from nature?

Answer. Life under apparent stillness in attitude is the thing which man can learn from nature. The Earth is never in a state of total inactivity. Nature carries on its work even where there is stillness all around. Winter is associated with inactivity, but this is not actually true.

Question.10. What will counting upto twelve and keeping quiet help us to achieve?

Answer. The poet asks each one of us to count to twelve and then be quiet, silent and motionless. This quietness will create a moment of togetherness among all; a condition which is foremost for the survival of humanity, which is indeed an achievement. It will also give us One to analyse our actions and their consequences.

TEXTUAL QUESTIONS:

1) What will counting upto twelve and keeping still help us achieve?

Answer. -According to the poet, we should stop all our activities for a moment. Let us give up using all our machines and engines for a short while because most of our troubles are due to our hurry and becoming rash. We should do introspection and keeping still will pave our path for peace.

2) Do you think Pablo Neruda advocates total inactivity and death?

Answer. -The poet Pablo Neruda does not advocate total inactivity and death. We should not confuse total inactivity with stillness. Total inactivity brings death while stillness entails rest for a moment so that we can have calm introspection. The poet wants to truck with death. Stillness will keep us start our activities again in a purposeful way.

3) What is the “sadness” that the poet refers to in the poem?

Answer. -The poet refers to the “sadness” which we form out of our own thinking and actions. We understand a lot of things but do not understand himself and his actions. His rush and hurry cause us troubles. He is bent up creating wars against humanity. He is the creator of all disasters. This is the ‘sadness’ that the poet refers to in the poem. Let us introspect ourselves and create mutual understanding.

4) What symbol from nature does the poet involve to say that there can be life under apparent stillness?

Answer. - The poet does not want us to confuse stillness with total inactivity. There is life under apparent stillness. He quotes the example of the Earth which is active round the clock. Thus the poet involves the Earth as a living symbol to prove his point. When everything seems dead, the Earth proves to be alive Under apparent stillness, the nature remains at work and thus keeps the Earth alive.

5) What does the title of the poem suggest to you? What do you think is the poem about?

Answer. -The title of the poem suggest that we must keep quiet for a moment. There will be silence and all will set together and realise the value of collectiveness. Here we should not confuse ‘stillness’ with ‘total inactivity’. Life should go on as it is doing about. Even the nature remains at work and keeps the Earth alive which remains busy in doing some activity. The poem stresses the significance of mutual understanding and necessity of introspection.

A THING OF BEAUTY

About the poet

John Keats was born in London in the year 1795 and died in Rome in 1821 at the young age of 25 due to illness. He is a romantic poet and his poetry is characterized by sensual imagery in his most popular work which is a series of odes, (a lyrical poem which is meant for a particular subject). Today, his poems are one of the most sought after creations in English literature. The above given poetry is an excerpt from his poem, -Endymion : A poetic Romance-(1818), considered to be an epic poem.

Background of the poem

Endymion is an epic poem in English. This poem by Keats is based on the Greek mythology of Endymion, the shepherd beloved by the moon goddess Selene. We see an elaboration of the original story and the moon Goddess Selene is named as “Cynthia”.

The poem equates Endymion’s original romantic ardor with a more universal quest for a self-destroying transcendence in which he might achieve a blissful personal unity with all creation.

Endymios in Greek mythology is a story of a handsome youth who spent much of his life sleeping. There are different views related to Endymion. According to some tradition Endymion was the king of Elis. Several traditions say that he was offered by Zeus to choose anything he might desire and Endymion in order to remain young forever chose an everlasting sleep.

While some tradition says Endymion’s eternal sleep was a punishment given by Zeus, because Endymion fell in love with Zeus’s wife Hera. Selene was deeply in love with Endymion, some say Selene had cursed Endymion into everlasting sleep so that she can enjoy him all by herself.

Selene's love for Endymion made her visit him every night while he was asleep. But in the poem Keats emphasizes on Endymion's love for Diana rather than on hers for him. Keats transformed this tale into prose to express the loves that have been felt on imaginative longings.

This theme of love is determined in the adventure of the Endymion quest by Diana. In the search for Diana Endymion falls in love with an earthly maiden. But in the end Diana and the earthly maiden turn out to be one and the same.

Central Idea

Beauty is a heavenly tonic/drink – an endless fountain of nectar. This beauty comes in different forms– a tale, a poem, a play, a lovely object of nature or the heavenly bodies. Explanation

A thing of beauty is a joy forever
Its loveliness increases, it will never Pass into nothingness; but will keep
A bower quiet for us, and a sleep
Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quiet breathing.

Meaning ... A thing of beauty is a perennial source of joy. It never diminishes, and its appeal seldom wanes. Like an eternal source of ebullience, it soothes our nerves, makes our place of living joyful, and fills us with beautiful dreams during our sleep. Like a reinvigorating balm, it makes us healthy, blissful.

Therefore, on every morrow, are we wreathing
A flowery band to bind us to the earth,

Spite of despondence, of the inhuman dearth
Of noble natures, of the gloomy days,
Of all the unhealthy and o'er-darkened ways

Meaning .. Living on earth is never always a bed of roses. Life often gets mired in sorrows, frustrations, and despair. In order to dispel such dark clouds of doom, the earth has its oasis. The myriad things of beauty that the earth is dotted with are like garlands of flower that bind us to the earth. Without these, life will be barren and insufferable. These beautiful objects provide us with the much-needed respite and solace.

Made for our searching: yes, in spite of all,
Some shape of beauty moves away the pall
From our dark spirits.
Such the sun, the moon,
Trees old, and young, sprouting a shady boon
For simple sheep; and such are daffodils

Meaning .. Sadly, many of the beautiful things on earth play hide-and-seek with us. They become elusive when we want to feast our eyes in them. This is rather tragic. However, they reappear and we can again draw bask in their bliss. The sun, the moon make themselves visible to us in periodic intervals. The woods grow from seed to sapling to large trees, eventually weather in their dotage, and fall. The cycle goes on relentlessly. In a similar way, sheep grow from their tiny shapes, till they are culled. Again more sheep are born to graze in the meadows offering us great delight. The daffodils blossom in thousands filling the landscape in their dazzling yellow, but they too, weather and fall. Thus, the cycle of birth and death continues.

With the green world they live in; and clear rills
That for themselves a cooling covert make
'Gainst the hot season; the mid forest brake,
Rich with a sprinkling of fair musk-rose blooms;
And such too is the grandeur of the dooms

Meaning .. The wild flowers and some species of trees thrive near the forest streams where the water gives them the nourishment. The shady foliage, and the cool ambience fosters their growth. It provides a shelter against the summer heat. The inside of the forest becomes awash with musk-rose blooms.

The power and awe of the Nature's pang of destruction is inescapable.

We have imagined for the mighty dead;
All lovely tales that we have heard or read;
An endless fountain of immortal drink,
Pouring unto us from the heaven's brink.

Meaning .. We have all heard and experienced the inexorable dance of gloom, doom and destruction. It is an integral part of the life on earth. However, the fountain of life and happiness never dries up. We have all heard stories of regeneration, joy, and optimism. This is because the Heaven pours a un-ending stream of nectar onto the earth, to sustain life, vitality and happiness for we all.

About the Poet:

Adrienne Cecile Rich (May 16, 1929 – March 27, 2012) was an American poet, essayist and feminist. She was called "one of the most widely read and influential poets of the second half of the 20th century", and was credited with bringing "the oppression of women to the forefront of poetic discourse." Widely read and hugely influential, Rich's career spanned seven decades and has hewed closely to the story of post-war American poetry itself. Her earliest work, including A Change of World (1951) which won the prestigious Yale Younger Poets Award, was formally exact and decorous, while her work of the late 1960s and 70s became increasingly radical in both its free-verse form and feminist and political content.

Summary

Aunt Jennifer's Tigers is an interesting poem which looks at the life of a married woman, the institution of marriage within which she suffers and shows how she uses art as a medium to escape the reality she's in. Divided into three stanzas of two couplets each, the poem employs a rhyme scheme of aabbccddeeff. The poem uses the figure of Aunt Jennifer and her needlework – a tapestry of magnificent tigers in a forest in order to explore the themes of womanhood, marriage, repression of one's personality and the importance of artistic expression.

One look at the poem tells us that the first stanza is all about Aunt Jennifer's tigers, the second about the aunt herself and the third stanza brings the two together where a part of Aunt Jennifer is preserved in the tigers she's stitched. In three short stanzas, the speaker demonstrates how marriage as an institution has failed to allow Aunt Jennifer the full realization of her self, how the artistic expression through her needlework provides a space where she can project her bottled-up aspirations and how her art will live beyond her death as an expression of her identity.

With its striking colour imagery and highly sensory language, Aunt Jennifer's Tigers gives a glimpse in the life of a woman who finds herself weighed down by the institution of marriage and finds her only escape in the art that she produces.

FIRST STANZA

Aunt Jennifer's tigers prance across a screen,
Bright topaz denizens of a world of green.
They do not fear the men beneath the tree;
They pace in sleek chivalric certainty.

EXPLANATION

- The poet is talking about a lady whom she addresses as aunt, Jennifer.
- She is embroidering a piece of cloth. It could be a table cloth or a wall hanging.
- The pattern shows tigers who are moving and jumping around all over the fabric.
- They are bright yellow in colour like the colour of the topaz stone (use of metaphor).
- The dense green forest background is their home.
- They are the proud and fearless citizens of the forest.

- Here is a contrast between Aunt Jennifer and her tigers. The tigers are fearless but this lady, who is embroidering them is not so.
- The tigers look elegant, shining and full of the gentleman's grace.

The poet is describing a lady whom she addresses as Aunt Jennifer. She says that Aunt Jennifer is doing embroidery on a piece of cloth which could be a table cloth or a wall hanging. She has designed it with beautiful tigers which are running fearlessly in the green forest. She has described their beauty by comparing them with a precious yellow stone known as topaz. She says that they appear bright yellow in the green backdrop of the forest. They are fearless and they are not affected by the presence of men. Here we can sense the contrast of behavior between the tigers and aunt, though the tigers designed by her are fearless but she herself is afraid of her husband. Further, the poet says that the tigers are proud and fearless citizens of the forests. They are very shiny and elegant.

Literary Devices

Anaphora: use of same word in two consecutive lines (they do not ... and they pace in...)

Metaphor: Use of topaz to describe the yellow color of tigers (Bright topaz)

SECOND STANZA

Aunt Jennifer's fingers fluttering through her wool
 Find even the ivory needle hard to pull.
 The massive weight of Uncle's wedding band
 Sits heavily upon Aunt Jennifer's hand.

EXPLANATION

- The lady's fingers are trembling with the fear of her husband.
- She is pursuing her hobby in her free time but probably, she is still afraid of her husband who could scold her.
- Her fingers are so tired of working endlessly all her life
- The needle is also heavy for her to pull out of the cloth.
- The words 'uncle's wedding band' as the band was bought by her husband, it is his till today.
- The lady is dependent on her husband .

- She is still burdened by the weight of the ring. ‘weight’ means the encirclement or trapping that has fallen upon her by getting married to him, she has been burdened by the obligations of married life, has become the man’s property.
- She has been living a demanding life due to which she has worn out in her old age.

Here the poet describes the fear of Aunt Jennifer towards her husband. She says that while she is doing embroidery, her fingers are quivering (shaking) with fear of her husband. Her husband doesn’t approve of her hobby of embroidery. Therefore, she trembles while she is embroidering the piece of cloth. It has become difficult for her to pull her needle up and down. Then she describes the wedding ring which was given by uncle to Aunt Jennifer on their wedding day. She says that it is a kind of burden for her to wear this ring. She has been tortured by her husband so much that the wedding ring which could have been a beautiful gift for her seems like a burden to her. She has faced so many difficulties in her married life that the little ring is described as a heavy band on her trembling fingers. This means that the ring is associated with some bad experiences in the form of torture she has faced because of her husband’s dominating behaviour.

Alliteration: ‘f’ sound is repeated in finger fluttering

THIRD STANZA

When Aunt is dead, her terrified hands will lie
 Still ringed with ordeals she was mastered by.
 The tigers in the panel that she made
 Will go on prancing, proud and unafraid.

EXPLANATION

- Her wish to live a free, fearless life is indicated by her choice of design – tigers.
- It shows her innermost desire of being strong, fearless which has been overpowered by her husband.
- Probably, her ordeal will end upon her death.

- Her frightened, shaking fingers will be put to rest.
- But still, even after death, the ring shall remain on her hand, i.e. her husband's rule over her is not yet over!
- After her death, her desire of freedom and fearlessness shall remain alive in these tigers which she has embroidered.

The poet says that one can easily sense aunt's desire for freedom and fearlessness through her design of tigers. Further she says that it is not possible for aunt to achieve this freedom during her lifetime. She will attain it only after her death but here also the irony of her life is that still, she will be tied up with shackles in the form of her husband's wedding ring. The ring was the sole proof of the tortures which she had faced from her husband. On the other hand, there are the tigers designed by Aunt Jennifer which will always depict her desire of living a fearless life by jumping proudly and bravely on the piece of cloth.

Answer : The tigers are called Aunt Jennifer's tigers as they were being embroidered on the tapestry of Aunt Jennifer.

b) How are they described here?

Answer : The tigers have been described here as bold and fearless and they move across the screen with confidence.

c) How are they different from Aunt Jennifer?

Answer : The tigers are different from Aunt Jennifer as they are shown as symbols of strength, fearlessness and confidence. Aunt Jennifer has been described as a timid female who is burdened with marital responsibilities and she is lacking in confidence.

d) What does the word, 'chivalric' mean?

Answer : The word 'chivalric' means 'gallant' or 'brave'.

Question 3 : Read the extract given below and answer the questions that follow.

When Aunt is dead, her terrible hands will lie
Still ringed with ordeals she was mastered by
The tigers in the panel that she made
Will go on prancing, proud and unafraid

a) Who is the aunt mentioned here?

Answer : The aunt mentioned here is Aunt Jennifer, the protagonist of Adrienne Rich's poem 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers'.

b) Why is she "ringed with ordeals"?

Answer : The 'ring' here refers to her wedding band or ring, which has brought with it a host of family responsibilities. She feels so surrounded (i.e., ringed) by her marital constraints that it seems like an ordeal to her.

c) What is the difference between her and the tigers?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer is quiet weak and submissive, whereas the tigers are strong, bold and powerful. She is bound by the constraints of her married life, while the tigers are free to move about in the green woods.

d) Why has Aunt Jennifer created the tigers so different from her own character?

Answer : The tigers created by Aunt Jennifer are an expression of her desire to free herself from the constraints of her married life. She wants to be bold and fearless like her tigers.

3 Marks Questions (30 – 40 Words)

Question 1 : What picture of male chauvinism (tyranny) do we find in the poem 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers'?

Answer : In the poem, 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers', Aunt Jennifer was oppressed by her husband. She was confined within the four walls of her husband's house and was not free to do what she wished. She was also overburdened by her marital responsibilities.

Question 2 : Aunt Jennifer's efforts to get rid of her fear proved to be futile. Comment.

Answer : Although Aunt Jennifer tried her best to conquer her fear, she continued to be traumatised and oppressed by her husband. Her act of embroidering fearless, prancing tigers could only give her a temporary release to her pent up feelings of liberation.

Question 3 : What is suggested by the phrase, 'massive weight of Uncle's wedding band'?

Answer : The weight that lies heavily on Aunt Jennifer's hand is the wedding band, which symbolises the harsh and difficult experiences of her married life. It is associated with her husband as he has traumatised her.

Question 4 : Why does Aunt Jennifer create animals that are so different from her own character?

Answer : In creating animals that are different from her own character, Aunt Jennifer found a means of living an alternate life that is denied to her, a life that is proud, free and fearless.

Through this difference, the poet suggests Aunt Jennifer's suppressed desire to become bold and fearless, and free from oppression.

Question 5 : What are the difficulties that Aunt Jennifer faced in her life?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer was probably a victim of oppression at the hands of the patriarchal society. She was subjugated by her husband and was not free to do what she wished.

Question 6 : How are Aunt Jennifer's tigers different from her?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer's tigers present a sharp contrast to her. While the Aunt is weak, meek, submissive and bound by restrictions, the tigers are strong, fearless, confident and free to move wherever they wish.

Question 7 : How does Aunt Jennifer express her bitterness and anger against male dominance?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer expresses her bitterness and anger against male dominance silently through her art. She creates tigers on her tapestry; animals that are unafraid of men and are symbolic of bravery, fearlessness and strength.

Question 8 : Why has Aunt Jennifer made 'prancing proud and unafraid' tigers?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer lived a fearful and restricted life. She expressed her desire of being free, unafraid and proud by knitting tigers that were 'prancing, proud and unafraid'.

Question 9 : What will happen to Aunt Jennifer's tigers when she is dead?

Answer : The tigers created by Aunt Jennifer would live forever. They will keep on prancing proud and unafraid even after her death.

Question 10 : What kind of married life did Aunt Jennifer lead?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer was confined to live inside her husband's house and was not free to do what she wished. She was burdened with her marital responsibilities and led a traumatic married life.

Question 11 : Why did Aunt Jennifer choose to embroider tigers on the panel?

Answer : Aunt Jennifer chose to embroider tigers on the panel because for her, the tigers were the symbols of bravery, fearlessness and strength. Unlike her, they were not afraid of men around them.

Question 12 : How do the words, 'denizens' and 'chivalric' add to our understanding of Aunt Jennifer's tigers?

Answer : 'Denizens' means that the tigers inhabit a green world where they are free from any boundations. 'Chivalric' means that they are brave and courageous.

Question 13 : What do the symbols , 'tigers', 'fingers' and 'ring' stand for in the poem, 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers'?

Answer : The 'tigers' are symbols of bravery and courage and also of Aunt Jennifer's desire for freedom. The 'fingers' are symbol of fear experienced by Aunt Jennifer and 'ring' symbolises an oppressive and binding marriage.

Question 14 : How has Aunt Jennifer created her tigers? What traits of tigers do they reveal?

Answer : According to the poet, Aunt Jennifer's tigers are golden-yellow in colour and are prancing across the screen. They live in a forest and are sleek, chivalric, majestic, elegant and unafraid of men.

The Last Lesson

About the Author

Alphonse Daudet, (born May 13, 1840, France—died Dec. 16, 1897, Paris?), French short-story writer and novelist, now remembered chiefly as the author of sentimental tales of provincial life in the south of France. Formerly, a schoolteacher, he quit it to make a living as a journalist in Paris. He took to writing, his poems collected into a volume called "Les Amoureuses".

Brief Introduction

'The last lesson ' written by Alphonse Daudet narrates about the year 1870 when the Prussian forces under Bismarck attacked and captured France. The French districts of Alsace and Lorraine went into Prussian hands. The new Prussian rulers discontinued the teaching of French in the schools of these two districts. The French teachers were asked to leave. Now M. Hamel could no longer stay in his old school. Still he gave the last lesson to his students with utmost devotion and sincerity as ever. One such student of M. Hamel, Franz who dreaded French class and M. Hamel's iron rod, came to the school that day thinking he would be punished as he had not learnt his lesson on participles. But on reaching school he found Hamel dressed in his fine Sunday clothes and the old people of the village sitting quietly on the back benches. It was due to an order from Berlin. That was the first day when he realized for the first time that how important French was for him, but it was his last lesson in French. The story depicts the pathos of the whole situation about how people feel when they don't learn their own language. It tells us about the significance of one's language in one's life for the very existence of a race and how important it is to safeguard it.

Main points

1. Franz is afraid of going to school as he has not learnt participles.

2. Wants to enjoy the beauty of nature - the bright sunshine - the birds chirruping in the woods - Prussian soldiers' drilling but resisted.
3. On reaching school Franz notices: unusual silence - Villagers occupying the last benches - teacher well dressed – everybody looked sad.
4. M. Hamel announces: Today is the last lesson in French.
5. Franz regrets and realizes why he had not taken his lesson seriously.
6. Understands the reason why teacher is well dressed and villagers sitting at the back.
7. M. Hamel realizes that all three, he himself, the children and the parents are to be blamed for losing respect and regards for the mother tongue.
8. Hamel says: French language – most beautiful, clear and logical language in the world. Always keep close the mother tongue to your heart as it is a key to the prison of slavery.
9. Hamel becomes emotional and writes on the black board —"Vive La France"
10. Franz remembers the last lesson very well.

Summary

The story is narrated by a French boy, Franz. He is lazy but sensitive and likes to play. He dislikes studying French and hates his teacher M. Hamel. After overpowering their districts of Alsace and Lorraine in France, Berlin has ordered that German language instead of French be taught in the schools there. It is the last day of their French teacher M. Hamel, who has been there for forty years. He is full of grief, nostalgia and patriotism. As a mark of respect to his hard work, the village men also attend his 'last lesson'. They are sad as they did not learn their mother tongue, French in their childhood. Franz is shocked to know that it's his last lesson, as he does not know French. Now, suddenly, he gets interested in learning it and understands everything taught on that day! He develops an instant liking for the teacher, M. Hamel and respects him for his sincerity and hard work. He feels sad at departing from him and is ashamed for not being able to recite the lesson of participles. M. Hamel tells them that they all are at fault for not being eager enough to learn, putting it off to the next day. He blames himself for not teaching them sincerely. His patriotism is reflected in his praise for the French language as being the most beautiful and most logical language in the world. He tells the class to guard their language as being close to one's language is the key to escape from the prison of slavery. It will help them in getting free from the Germans. They realize the importance of learning their mother tongue and that they have been defeated by the Germans because of their illiteracy. Franz feels that it is not possible to take away one's language from a person as it is natural to each being, may it be the "coo" to the pigeons or "French" to the Frenchmen.

The Story Retold

The author was late for school and dreaded scolding from his teacher, Mr M Hamel who was to question them that day on participles. The narrator had not learnt his lessons. It was a bright day and he felt tempted to stay back from school and enjoy the day but somehow he resisted the temptation to do so. While he was passing by the town hall, he saw a crowd in front of the bulletin-board. Since the war was on, all the bad news had come from that board. As he was hurrying past, the blacksmith called out to him and said there was plenty of time to reach the school in time.

When the author reached school, he was very surprised at the eerie silence that surrounded the school. It seemed more like a Sunday than a working day. He had depended on the commotion to enter the class unnoticed but to his surprise everyone was already in their places and he had to go before everybody. What surprised him even more was that instead of scolding him the teacher was kind and told him to take his place.

After settling, the narrator, Franz noticed that the teacher was wearing his beautiful green coat, his frilled shirt and his little black silk cap with embroidery on it. This attire was worn by M Hamel only on inspection or prize days. The atmosphere that day was very solemn and what surprised him most was when he saw the village elders sitting in the class on the last benches. Everyone was sad. One of the persons sitting there was old Hauser who had even brought an old primer which he thumbed at the edges. He held it open on his knees.

The narrator wondered at the changes when suddenly M Hamel mounted his chair and announced that it was their last French lesson as the order had come from Berlin that only German will be taught in the schools of Alsace and Lorriane. The narrator was shocked to hear this and suddenly those books which had seemed a burden became very dear to him. He regretted not having learnt his lessons. Now the narrator understood why Mr Hamel had put on his Sunday clothes and why the villagers were attending the class that day. It was their way of thanking the master for his commendable service of forty years and showing respect to their country. They also regretted missing the school so often. When the class started, the narrator heard his name being called out to recite the rules of the participles which he was unable to do as he got stuck on the first word. He felt very disgusted with himself at his failure to do so. Mr Hamel said he wouldn't scold him for he was, as it is, feeling so bad about it. Everyday learning had been postponed to the next day and now there was no time left to learn. He further said that they would be mocked by people for calling themselves French although they couldn't speak or write their own language.

Further, Mr Hamel says even many parents had preferred to send their children to work than to school. Then he confesses that he too was to blame because many times he had given a holiday when he wanted to go fishing. Mr Hamel said that French was the most beautiful language in the world. It was the most clearest and logical. He then opened the book and explained a grammar lesson to them. The writer was surprised at himself for he understood the lesson very well. Also Mr Hamel had explained the lesson more patiently than ever. It almost seemed as if in one go he wanted to give them all that he knew. The grammar lesson was followed by a writing lesson. That day Mr Hamel had new copies for them in which it was written in beautiful round hand — France, Alsace, France, Alsace. They looked like little flags floating everywhere in the classroom. All the children worked seriously and quietly. Suddenly, the writer heard the pigeons cooing and wondered will they be also made to sing in German.

While the class was doing their writing assignment, M Hamel sat motionless in his chair staring at all the things as if he wanted to remember just how everything looked in that little school room. Since M Hamel had started the school forty years ago, nothing had changed except the desk and chairs had worn off and the trees had grown taller. The narrator wonders that it must be heart-breaking for him to hear his sister moving the trunks in the room above, packing to leave the country next day. Mr Hamel is an epitome of patience that day; a patriot to the core Mr M Hamel was very patient that day. When it was the chance of the babies to chant the alphabet, even the old villagers joined in. Their voice trembled with emotion. At twelve all of them could hear the Prussians returning from drill. At this overcome with emotion, M Hamel went to the blackboard and wrote, Vive La France (Long Live France). He then leaned against the wall and dismissed the class with a gesture. To sum up, we can say that the story is a wake-up call for all those people who keep on postponing things endlessly. Something like this happened with the natives of Alsace. They had to forego learning their mother tongue. In the same vein, the story extrapolates the fact that war makes man inhuman and insensitive to the feelings of others.

He was a true patriot. They liked fishing so much. Mister Hamel loved his language (French) and also admire. Mr. Hamel says that the French language is the most beautiful and equitable language of the world. He was very emotional. The people of the village loved Mr. Hamel.

Q. 13. The people in the story suddenly realize how precious their language is to them. What shows you this? Why does this happen?

Answer: The story was written in the days of the Franco-Prussian war in which France was defeated by Prussia. In this story the French districts of Alsace-Lorraine have passed into Prussian hands. M. Hamel is the teacher of French and a boy, Franz who never serious in the class of M. Hamel. One day he was late for school. He feared that his teacher would scold as he was not very sure about participles which the teacher, M. Hamel, is going to test that day. But finally he decided to go to school. As he entered he saw the crowd has gathered round the bulletin board. He did not stop there. On arriving at school, he noted an unusual silence. He entered into the class and was greeted with a strange sight. The last benches which were always empty were occupied by the village elders who look grim and solemn. Franz noticed M. Hamel was dressed nicely and asked Franz to sit so that he could start his lesson. The teacher made a startling announcement that this would be their last lesson in French as the new teacher would be arriving the following day. He said, “ The order has come from Berlin to teach only German in the schools of Alsace and Lorraine. The new teacher comes tomorrow. This is your last French lesson. I want you to be very attentive.” There came a sudden change in the minds of the people and they developed a new profound love French. Franz was overcome with a feeling of remorse and regretted for wasting his time in trivial pursuits. He decided to pay attention to the lesson since school had become very important for him. The people and Franz himself realized how precious their language is to them. M. Hamel had been teaching in that school for last forty years. His dedication, devotion, discipline impressed them. He realizes the real worth of his school and the teacher whom they have all taken for granted all these years. M. Hamel in his last address told about the importance of French. He called that it was the most beautiful language in the world. It is the clearest and the most logical one. M. Hamel was overcome by strong emotions and in large letter he wrote on the board 'Viva La France' – long live France!

Q. 14. Franz thinks:’ “Will they make them sing in German, even the pigeons?” What could this mean?

Answer: The Alsace and Lorraine districts were under the regime of France. During the FrancoPrussian war in which France was defeated by Prussia led by Bismarck and both these districts have passed into Prussian hands. Earlier they were learning their own language, French. As per new set up, an order was passed that German was to be taught in the schools of Alsace and Lorraine. M. Hamel who had been teaching the French for the last forty years. In his last lesson he told that from the next day in the schools of both districts would teach only German instead of French from a new teacher. They won't be learning their own most beautiful, clearest and logical language. He told the importance of their own language, this feeling of M. Hamel aroused their patriotic feelings. There came a sudden change in Franz. He disliked learning German. He heard and saw the pigeons. He immediately remarked: “Will they make them sing in German, even the pigeons?” It is meant that the German can impose German language on the people of Alsace and Lorraine but they can't impose this language on the birds etc. They can enslave the people but have no authority to compel the cooing pigeons.

The Lost Spring

As we all know, spring is the season associated with optimism and hope. It also works as a metaphor for the childhood stage of our life. Right from the time we're born until late childhood, every child hopes for new beginnings and a bright future. The phase of childhood is all about innocence, energy, and tremendous inclination towards outdoors activities along with fun and play. And playtime does not have any limits. It is also a time of getting more skill and knowledge.

The 'Lost Spring' written by Anees Jung talks about the national shame of children being forced to live a life of poverty and exploitation. The main two protagonists of the chapter, Saheb-e-Alam and Mukesh don't live their childhood as they have to carry the burden of poverty and illiteracy. In their miserable stories of exploitation, the author provides glimpses of fortitude and resilience.

About the Author

Anees Jung is an Indian female author, journalist and columnist who writes for major newspapers in India and abroad. She was born in Rourkela and belongs to an aristocratic family in Hyderabad. Her father, Nawab Hosh Yar Jung, who was a renowned scholar and poet, worked as the musahib (adviser) to the last Nizam (prince) of Hyderabad State. And her mother and brother are also well-known Urdu poets.

Jung hit the headlines with the publication of 'Unveiling India in 1987', which is primarily a travel diary that focuses on interviews with women. She went on to write many subsequent books on the same topic, and talked to women about their everyday lives, and wrote books like 'Night of the New Moon: Encounters with Muslim women in India' (1993) and 'Seven Sisters' (1994). Her book 'Breaking the Silence' (1997) includes conversations on women's lives from around the world.

Introduction

The story, "Lost Spring" describes the pitiable condition of poor children who have been forced to miss the joy of childhood due to the socio-economic condition that prevails in this man-made world. These children are denied the opportunity of schooling and forced into labour early in life. Anees Jung gives voice to eliminate child labour by educating the children and to enforce the laws against child labour by the governments strictly. The call is to end child exploitation and let the children enjoy the days of the spring that bring joy under their feet.

Summary

I – Sometimes I find a rupee in the garbage.

The first part tells the writer's impressions about the life of the poor rag pickers. The rag pickers have migrated from Dhaka and found a settlement in Seemapuri. Their fields and homes had been swept away by storms. They had come to the big city to find a living. They are poor. The writer watches Saheb every morning scrounging for "gold" in her neighbourhood. Garbage is a means of survival for the elders and for the children it is something wrapped in wonder. The children come across a coin or two from it. These people have desires and ambitions, but they do not know the way to achieve them. There are quite a few things that are unreachable to them, namely shoes, tennis and the like. Later Saheb joins a tea stall where he could earn 800 Rupees and all the meals. The job has taken away his freedom.

II – I want to drive a car.

The second part deals with the life of Mukesh, who belongs to the family of Bangle-makers. Firozabad is best known for its glass-blowing industry. Nearly 20,000 children are engaged in this business and the law that forbids child labour is not known here. The living condition and the working environment is a woeful tale. Life in dingy cells and working close to hot furnaces make these children blind when they step into the adulthood. Weighed down by the debt, they can neither think nor find a way to come out of this trap. The politicians, middlemen, policemen and bureaucrats will all obstruct their way of progress. The women in the household consider it as their fate and just follow the tradition. Mukesh is different from the rest of the folk there. He dreams to become a motor mechanic. The garage is far away from his house but he shall walk.

Gist of the lesson:

Sometimes I find a rupee in garbage

- The author examines and analyses the impoverished conditions and traditions that condemn children to a life of exploitation these children are denied an education and forced into hardships early in their lives.
- The writer encounters Saheb – a rag picker whose parents have left behind the life of poverty in Dhaka to earn a living in Delhi.
- His family like many other families of rag pickers lives in Seemapuri. They do not have other identification other than a ration card.
- The children do not go to school and they are excited at the prospect of finding a coin or even a ten rupee note for rummaging in the garbage.
- It is the only way of earning.
- The writer is pained to see Saheb, a rag picker whose name means the ruler of earth, Lose the spark of childhood and roams barefooted with his friends.

- From morning to noon the author encounters him in a tea stall and is paid Rs. 800 He sadly realizes that he is no longer his own master and this loss of identity weighs heavily on his tender shoulders.

I want to drive a car

- The author then tells about another victim, Mukesh who wants to be a motor mechanic.
- He has always worked in the glass making industry.
- They are exposed to various health hazards like losing their eyesight as they work in abysmal conditions, in dark and dingy cells.
- Mukesh's father is blind as were his father and grandfather before him.
- So burdened are the bangle makers of Firozabad that they have lost their ability to dream unlike Mukesh who dreams of driving a car.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks, 30-40 words)

Question.1. To which country did Saheb's parents originally belong? Why did they come to India?
or

Why did Saheb's parents leave Dhaka and migrate to India?
or

Why had the ragpickers come to live in Seemapuri?

Answer. Saheb's parents belonged to Dhaka in Bangladesh, where they lived amidst green fields. They and the other ragpickers left their homes many years ago and migrated to India in search of a livelihood, as their homes and fields were destroyed in storms. This forced them to come to India, where they settled in the slums of Seemapuri.

Question.2. What job did Saheb take up? Was he happy?

Answer. Saheb took up work at a tea stall, where he had to perform several odd jobs, including getting milk from the milk booth. He was not happy, as he had lost his independence. Though he earned ₹ 800, and got all his meals free, he was no longer his own master.

Question.3. In what sense is garbage gold to the ragpickers?
or

Garbage to them is gold; why does the author say so about the ragpickers?

Answer. Garbage is gold to the ragpickers of Seemapuri because it provides them items which can be sold for cash, which can buy them food and is a means of survival. Moreover, it is gold also because the ragpickers can find stray coins and currency notes in it.

Question.4. How is Mukesh different from the other bangle makers of Firozabad?

Answer. Mukesh has the courage to dream big in spite of all adversity, whereas the other bangle makers of Firozabad have resigned to their fate, and have suppressed all their hopes and desires. Mukesh refuses to follow the 'God-given lineage' of bangle making and wants to be a motor mechanic when he grows up.

Question.5. Whom does Anees Jung blame for the sorry plight of the bangle makers?

Answer. Anees Jung blames the middlemen, the policemen, the lawmakers, the bureaucrats and the politicians for the sorry plight of the bangle makers. These people conspire against and exploit the poor bangle makers. They pay them meagre wages, do not let them form co-operatives, and compel their children to join the same trade at an early age.

Question.6. What is Mukesh's dream? Do you think he will be able to fulfil his dream? Why? Why not?

or
What was Mukesh's dream? In your opinion, did he achieve his dream?

Is it possible for Mukesh to realise his dream? Justify your answer.
Answer. Mukesh's dream is to become a motor-mechanic. It is no doubt difficult for Mukesh to achieve his dream, as he is torn between his desires and his family tradition, which he cannot escape. Besides, he has to face a number of obstacles in the form of sahkars, middlemen, bureaucrats, law makers, politicians etc. However, his will to work hard, and his strong determination could make him achieve his dream.

Question.7. In spite of despair and disease pervading the lives of the slum children, they are not devoid of hope. How far do you agree?

Answer. In spite of growing up amidst despair and disease, children who live in the slum have the desire to achieve something big in life, like Mukesh. This shows that they are not devoid of hope. Saheb, a ragpicker, is eager to go to a school and learn. Mukesh, who works in dark, dingy cells making bangles, dreams of becoming a motor mechanic, which is very much against his family tradition.

Question.8. Who is Mukesh? What is his dream?

Answer. Mukesh is a child labourer who Works in a glass bangle making factory that is situated in Firozabad. Though Mukesh belongs to a poor family which is engaged in bangle making, he dreams of becoming a motor mechanic when he grows up.

Question.9. Why could the bangle makers not organise themselves into a cooperative?

Answer. The bangle makers could not organise themselves into a cooperative because they were trapped in the vicious circle of sahkars, middlemen, policemen, up bureaucrats and politicians. If they tried to organise themselves, they would be beaten by up the police and put in jail.

Question.10. Mention any two hazards of working in the bangle industry.

Answer. The glass bangle industry offers a very unhealthy and hazardous environment to the people working in it. They have to work in the glass furnaces with high temperature in dingy cells without air and light. Workers, including child labourers, lose their eyesight at an early age. Slogging for long, relentless hours also has adverse effects on their bodies.

Question.11. Why does the author say that the bangle makers are caught in a vicious web?

Answer. The bangle makers in Firozabad are exploited at the hands of the Sahukars, middlemen, policemen, law makers, bureaucrats and politicians. They toil day and night, but are not paid appropriate wages and are steeped in poverty. They cannot form cooperatives for their betterment. Moreover, their children are also compelled to join the same trade at an early age and cannot dare to take up any other profession.

Question.12. Is Saheb happy working at the tea stall? How do you know?

Answer. Saheb is not happy working at the tea stall. He is paid a fixed wage of Rs 800, and also receives all his meals free. But the author notices that his face has lost its carefree look, which makes it evident that he is not happy. He has lost his independence, and is no longer his own master.

Long Answer Type Questions (6 Marks, 120-150 words)

Question.1. Give a brief account of life and activities of the people like Saheb-e-Alam settled in Seemapuri.

Answer. The author's acquaintance with Saheb and other barefoot ragpickers introduced her to Seemapuri. It is a slum area located on the periphery of Delhi. The residents of Seemapuri consist of people who left Bangladesh in the 1971 War and are basically refugees. Saheb's family is among them. The area does not have facilities of sewage, drainage or running water. About 10000 ragpickers live here. Their only means of livelihood is ragpicking, and they treat rags as valuable as gold. These ragpickers have lived here for more than thirty years without any identity. They do not have permits but have ration cards, with which they can get their names on the voter's list and also buy grains at subsidised rates.

Question.2. 'Lost Spring' explains the grinding poverty and traditions that condemn thousands of people to a life of abject poverty. Do you agree? Why / Why not?

Answer. 'Lost Spring' is a good narration of grinding poverty and traditions to which thousands of people have succumbed. The story revolves around the pitiable condition of poor children who have been forced to live in slums and work hard in dirty conditions. The story is divided into two parts. The first part tells the writer's impression about the life of poor ragpickers who have migrated from Bangladesh, but now have settled in the Seemapuri area of Delhi. The second part narrates the miserable life of the bangle makers in the town of Firozabad. The stark reality of these families is that in spite of back-breaking hard work that they put in, they cannot have two square meals a day. Besides, they are victims of exploitation by those above them and also suffer the consequences of blind belief in traditions.

Question.3. The bangle makers of Firozabad make beautiful bangles and make everyone happy but they live and die in squalor. Elaborate.

Answer. Firozabad is the hub of India's glass-blowing industry where families have spent generations making bangles to adorn married women. The stark reality of these families is that in spite of the back breaking hard work that they put in, they cannot have two square meals a day. They work in deplorable conditions and many lose their eyesight early. To top it all, they live in unhygienic conditions where there is a lack of basic amenities too. The sad reality is that the workers cannot organise themselves into a cooperative. They are devoid of all enthusiasm and do not dare to dream of anything better. The fear of the police and lack of leadership among themselves have confined them to a vicious circle of poverty, indifference and greed. Thus, while they bring happiness to everyone's life, their own life is steeped in poverty and squalor.

TEXTUAL QUESTIONS

1. What is Saheb looking for in the garbage dumps? Where is he and where has he come from?

A. Saheb is looking for any precious thing which he cannot afford to buy. Things like a rupee, silver coin or a pair of shoes. He has come to the garbage dump in the writer's neighbourhood. He lives in Seemapuri in Delhi and has come from Dhaka.

A. People who work in the glass bangle industry lose their eyesight.

6. How is Mukesh's attitude to his situation different from that of his family?

A. Mukesh dares to dream and has a way out of his situation. He aspires to become a motor mechanic. On the other hand, his family does not dare to dream. They are too tired and scared to do something to come out of their grim situation.

7. What could be some of the reasons for the migration of people from villages to cities?

A. People migrate from villages to cities in search of a better life. They want to earn money so that they can lead a good life and rear their children in a better way. As cities have more opportunities for work, this makes them migrate from the villages to these big cities.

8. Would you agree that promises made to poor children are rarely kept? Why do you think this happens in the incidents narrated in the text?

A. Yes, I agree that the promises made to poor children are rarely fulfilled. In the story the writer jokingly offers the rag picker boy to join a school that she would open. In fact, she does not intend to open a school. She speaks mindlessly but the boy takes it to be true and later asks her if the school has opened. There are many such hollow promises in the boy's life because the person who makes the promise never intends to fulfil it.

9. What forces conspire to keep the workers in the bangle industry of Firozabad in poverty?

A. The writer tells us that the bangle – makers of Firozabad are poverty – stricken. They are burdened by the fact of the particular caste in which they are born – bangle – makers. They have to continue the traditional profession. Further, the society has formed a harsh circle around them. The money – lenders, middlemen, policemen, law – keepers, officers and politicians altogether form a barrier around them and tie them in the grip of poverty. They cannot escape from it.

10. How, in your opinion, can Mukesh realise his dream?

A. Mukesh dared to dream and wanted to become a motor mechanic. He wanted to drive cars too. He took the initial step by aspiring to do something different from the family business. I think that Mukesh can realize his dream with determination and hard work.

11. Mention the hazards of working in the glass bangles industry.

A. The poor bangle makers in Firozabad work in dangerous conditions. The furnaces have very high temperatures and no ventilation. Hence, they are prone to ailments like lung cancer. While polishing the bangles, the dust harms their eyes and many lose their vision. They remain in dark for long hours and so are unable to see during the daytime.

12. Why should child labour be eliminated and how?

A. Forcing a child to work is a crime. This is so in order to prevent exploitation of children. If forced to work, Children cannot enjoy their childhood. They cannot get proper education. Also, when they are forced into hazardous works, they get ailments at a young age. This destroys their future. Their parents overlook all these facts as they need money. So, the government has to become proactive and take measures to check child labour and enforce the law strictly.

Summary

The story, “Deep Waters” tells us how the writer overcame his fear of water and learned swimming with sheer determination and will power. He had developed a terror of water since childhood. When he was three or four years old the writer had gone to California with his father. One day on the beach, the waves knocked the child down and swept over him. The child was terrified but the father who knew there was no harm laughed. The experience bred a permanent fear of water in the child’s sub-conscious mind. Still another incident, more serious, increased his terror. The writer was trying to learn swimming in the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool in Yakima. One day while he was waiting for other boys, a big boy suddenly played a dangerous prank and pushed him into the water. The writer was terribly frightened. He went down nine feet into the water. His lungs were full of the unreleased air. When he reached the bottom, he jumped upward with all his strength. He came up but very slowly. He tried to catch hold of something like a rope but grasped only at water. He tried to shout but no sound came out. He went down again. His lungs ached, head throbbed and he grew dizzy. He felt paralyzed with fear. All his limbs were paralyzed. Only the movement of his heart told him that he was alive. Again he tried to jump up. But this time his limbs would not move at all. He looked for ropes, ladders and water wings but all in vain. Then he went down again, the third time. This time all efforts and fear ceased. He was moving towards peaceful death. The writer was in peace. When he came to consciousness, he found himself lying on the side of the pool with the other boys nearby. The terror that he had experienced in the pool never left him. It haunted him for years and years to come. It spoilt many of his expeditions of canoeing, swimming and fishing. It spoilt his pleasures in Maine Lakes, New Hampshire, Deschutes, Columbia and Bumping Lake etc.

But the writer was determined to conquer his terror. He took help of a swimming instructor to learn swimming. The instructor taught him various actions necessary in swimming part by part. He put his face under water and exhaled and inhaled raising it above water. He practiced it for several weeks. He had to kick with his legs a few weeks on the side of the pool. At last he combined all these actions and made the writer swim. He learned swimming but the terror continued. So deep goes our childhood experiences! So fearful is the fear of fear! Whenever he was in water the terror returned. Hence forward the writer tried to terrorize terror itself. He tried to face the new challenge. When terror came, he confronted it by asking it sarcastically as to what it can really do to him? He plunged into the water as if to defy the fear. Once he took courage the terror vanquished. He faced the challenge deliberately in various places like the Warm Lake. He conquered it at last. The experiences of the writer throw some important lights on certain aspects of life. Experiences of pain or pleasure in childhood remain in the sub-conscious mind and influence our feelings later too. The fear of water acted on the writer in that way. Even after being an expert in swimming, the writer felt terror. There was no reason at all. Once he took courage, the fear vanished. That shows most of our fears are baseless. Fear creates dangers where there is none. The writer's experiences further confirm the proverbial truth, "Where there is a will, there is a way."

Textual Question

Q1. What is the "misadventure" that William Douglas speaks about? Or, What were the series of emotions and fears that Douglas experienced when he was thrown into the pool? What plans did he make to come to the surface?

Answer – William Douglas, the narrator recounts a terrifying childhood experience when he came face to face with death. When he was 10 or 11 years old, he was tossed into a 9 feet deep swimming pool at YMCA by a bigger boy just for the sake of "fooling" or for fun. Although he was a beginner, Douglas did not lose heart and planned to push himself with all his force. He thought once he comes to the surface, he would peddle to the age of the pool. Unfortunately, this strategy did not work. He could not pop out of the water like a cork. His legs failed to support him. Terror gripped him with water all around him, did not know what to do. His lungs get ready to burst out and the pounding heart throbbing head made things worse. He could not scream and was frozen with fear. It seemed that the water around him was still and no amount of effort helped him. Suddenly, he felt there were tender arms around him and he was rescued.

Q2. How did this experience affect him?

Answer – After being rescued Douglas had lost consciousness and found himself beside the pool lying on his stomach and vomiting. This misadventure left him weak and trembling. He shook seriously and cried at night. He could not eat anything and for days a haunting fear was knocking in his heart. The slightest exertion trouble him very much, making him weak from the bottom of his heart.

Q3. Why was Douglas determined to get over his fear of water?

Answer – After some years Douglas desperately wanted to get rid of his paralysing fear because any activity, bathing or in the water would bring back the icy horror of the pool. It was a terrible handicap that had seized his mind completely. His legs would become paralysed thinking of the swimming pool incident. He wanted to overcome it because the terrified fear had removed his fishing trips and deprived him of the joy of boating and swimming.

Q4. How did the instructor “build a swimmer” out of Douglas?

Answer – Douglas agonising fear was ruining his life. He could not enjoy even the day to day activities related to water sports. Finally he decided to get an instructor and learn to swim. The instructor understood the magnitude and severity of the terror that gripped him. For 3 months Douglas repeatedly made to go back and forth across the pool. Then Douglas was taught to put his face underwater and exhale and to raise his nose and inhale. Later, for mixed together, he was made to kick with his legs at the side of pool. Then the instructor built a swimmer bit by bit and put each bit together into an integrated whole. Finally he told the narrator to swim with the narrator managed to do quite successfully.

Q5. How did Douglas make sure that he conquered the old terror?

Answer – After the instructor completed his training, Douglas wanted to cross check if he had really conquered his old terror. So he tried swimming all alone in the pool. Only a slight trace of terror would return which he managed to tackle well. Still not satisfied, Douglas went to Lake Wentworth and swam there practicing all the strokes. Only once he felt that the old terror return. When he put his face under the water. Douglas did not want the slightest traces of fear to remain. So he went west and camped besides the warm lake. He dived into the lake and only when he swam across to the others shore and back, he shouted with joy. Finally he was sure that he had defeated his old ally-the phobia of water bodies.

Q6. How does Douglas make clear to the reader the sense of panic that gripped him as he almost drowned? Describe the details that have made the description vivid.

Answer – Douglas mention each and every details nicely. Although panicky, he had his strategy in place – popping up like a cork and then paddling to the edge of the pool. Unfortunately, His attempt was gone wrong and terror seized him. He also tried to grab a rope but his hands clutched only at water. He tried to yell but no sound came out. His body parts was not supporting him because his legs were paralysed, lungs ached and head throbbled. His voice was frozen. The only signs he have were his beating heart and pounding head. Douglas tried to strike back by jumping hard. This did not make a differences as there was water all around. He attempted to come out of water a third time, but in vain. He sucked for air and got water. Finally, he stopped making efforts and fainted into oblivion. All the above details of his gripping. The clarity with which he explains is amazing and makes the reader visualise his dismal condition aptly.

Q7. How did Douglas overcome his fear of water?

Answer – The fear that gripped Douglas after the near drowning accident in the pool, strike him many times. Finally, one, October he decided to engage an instructor and learn the art of swimming. He practiced 5 days week, an hour each day. The instructor understood the magnitude of the problem and devised noble method by which Douglas waist was attached to a group that went through a pulley. the instructor held on the rope as the narrator swam back and forth across the floor. Douglas could feel confident for this. However he grew panicky every time the instructor loosened his grip or when he kept his face underwater.

The instructor also taught Douglas to exhale under water and inhale by raising his nose from water. He made him kick with his legs so that the narrator could command them. From October to April, Douglas perfected his swimming. To get rid of his childhood fear, he subjected himself to rigorous test. After that he used to practice in the pool till July. Still he was not satisfied and went to Lake Wentworth. liquid filled old traces of air coming back but he dropped them away by sheer grit and determination. To be double sure, he dived into the warm lake. His Joy knew no bounds because he had conquered his fear ultimately.

Q8. Why does Douglas as an adult recount a childhood experience of terror and his conquering of it? What larger meaning does he draw from this experience?

Answer – Douglas as an adult recounts his childhood experience of terror and his ability to conquer his fear which portray that nothing is impossible, when a person wants to set things possible. Determination is the only thing that required to overcome any hurdle in life. He faced this thing practically when a big bully tossed him into the deep end of the YMCA pool. Through training from an instructor finally made him a swimmer.

Q9. “All we have to fear is fear itself”. Have you ever had a fear that you have now overcome? Share your experience with your partner.

Answer – Fear is just a state of mind. If we dread things they become difficult and unattainable and the moment we get determined to overcome from a particular fear every hurdles resolves. Almost everyone has fear through which day live. We depend upon us whether we I want to face it or not.

Like Douglas who had the fear for deep water, I had the fear from height. Whenever I used to get on some height, I used to feel that I will fall and die. Tall buildings and hill stations where something I used to keep myself away from. My fear had lost all the limits when one day I used to climb a ladder to pull something down and I felt as this was the end of the world for me. So, my family have decided a trip to Darjeeling, so that I could experience the beauty of height. Things have a different perception when looked from above. There, my parents made me climb a particular mountain. As I kept climbing up my fears soared, but when I finally reached the top and looked below things started looking beautiful as never before. From that point I overcome my greatest fear and feel myself to be a better and relaxed person.

him cross a pool suspended by a rope attached to a pulley. Then he taught him to breathe while swimming, and finally he taught him the leg movements and other strokes.

Question 13 : What happened when a 'big bruiser of a boy' tossed Douglas into the YMCA pool? How did Douglas plan to come out?

Answer : Douglas landed inside the pool in a sitting position, swallowed water and went at once to the bottom of the YMCA pool. On the way down he planned that once his feet would hit the bottom he would make a big jump to come out.

Question 14 : What efforts did Douglas make to get over his fear of water?

Answer : Douglas engaged an instructor to get over his fear of water. The instructor built a swimmer out of him. But to confirm that the terror would not strike him when he was swimming alone, Douglas decided to go to Lake Wentworth and swam across to the other shore and back.

Question 15 : Why did Douglas go to Lake Wentworth in New Hampshire? How did he make his terror flee?

Answer : Douglas was not satisfied with his practice so he decided to go to Lake Wentworth. There he was swimming in the middle of the lake, only once did the terror return, but he finally overcame it, and it did not return again.

Question 16 : Why was Douglas determined to get over his fear of water?

Answer : The phobia of water hampered Douglas' joys of enjoying different water sports like fishing, canoeing, boating and swimming. He did not want to live with this handicap and so was determined to overcome his fear of water.

Question 17 : What did Douglas experience when he went down to the bottom of the pool for the first time?

Answer : When Douglas was going down to the bottom of the pool for the first time, those nine feet felt almost like ninety feet to him. His lungs were ready to burst, but somehow he summoned all his strength and made desperate efforts for survival.

Question 18 : When Douglas realised that he was sinking, how did he plan to save himself?

Answer : When Douglas realised that he was sinking he did not lose his wits and thought to make a big jump when his feet touched the bottom, so that he could reach the surface and finally paddle to the edge of the pool.

Question 19 : What sort of terror seized Douglas as he went down the water with a yellow glow? How could he feel that he was still alive?

Answer : When Douglas found himself deep down into the water with a yellow glow, stark terror gripped him and he had no control over it. He felt paralysed, stiff and rigid with fear. It was only his throbbing heart that made him realise that he was still alive.

Long Answer Type Questions : 6 Marks (120 – 150 Words)

Question 1 : “All we have to fear is fear itself”. Describe Douglas’ experiences which led to making of the statement.

Answer : Douglas has experienced both the sensation of dying and terror that the fear of death can cause. Strong will, determination, courage as well as honest labour won over all his terrors and fears. The will to live brushed aside all his fears. In reality all our fears are only psychological , and can be easily won over, if we can control our mind. This realisation makes Douglas resolve to learn swimming by engaging an instructor. This instructor, piece by piece ,built Douglas into a swimmer. However, his first step was to drive away Douglas’ fear of water, before training him in swimming techniques. When Douglas tried and swam the length of the pool up and down, small traces of his old terror of water would return. So, he went to Lake Wentworth, dived at Triggs Island and swam two miles across the lake to Stamp Act Island. Finally, he was certain that he had conquered his fear of water.

Question 2 : “I crossed to oblivion, and the curtain of life fell.” What was the incident which nearly killed Douglas and developed in him a strong aversion to water.?

Answer : The incident which nearly killed Douglas occurred when he was ten or eleven years old. He had decided to learn swimming at the YMCA pool, and thus get rid of his fear of water. One morning, when he was alone at the pool, waiting for others, a big bully of a boy tossed him into the deep end of the pool. Though he had planned a strategy to save himself as he went down, his plan did not work. Thrice he struggled hard to come to the surface, but failed each time. He was frightened and got almost drowned in the pool, lost his consciousness and felt that he would die. Though he was ultimately saved, this misadventure developed in him a strong aversion to water.

Question 3 : Desire, determination and diligence lead to success. Explain the value of these qualities in the light of Douglas' experience in 'Deep Water'.

Answer : The terror of water followed Douglas wherever he went. To get rid of it, he made a strong determination. He decided to overcome his fear through his will power. He engaged an instructor who would perfect him in swimming. The instructor first helped him drive away his fear, and then gave him many exercises besides teaching him how to exhale and inhale in water.

The practice went on for months together, during which his fear came back to haunt him, but his desire and firm will made him persist in his efforts. It was only through sheer determination and diligence that Douglas could not only counter his terror, but also became an expert swimmer.

He swam across and back large distances to ensure that his fear of water did not return. Hence, desire, determination and diligence succeeded in removing his fear of water.

Question 4 : What misadventure did Douglas experience at the YMCA swimming pool?

Answer : As the timid Douglas sat alone at the side of the YMCA swimming pool waiting for other people to come, a big boy, probably eighteen years old came there. He asked Douglas whether he would like to be ducked. Saying this, he picked up Douglas and tossed him into the deep end of the pool. Douglas landed inside the pool in a sitting position, swallowed water and went at once to the bottom of the pool. Though Douglas was extremely frightened he had his wits intact so on his way down he started to plan. He decided that when his feet would hit the bottom he would make a big jump, come to the surface, lie flat on it and then paddle to the edge of the pool.

Question 5 : Describe the efforts made by Douglas to save himself from drowning in the YMCA swimming pool.

Answer : When his feet hit the bottom of the pool, Douglas summoned up all his strength and made a great spring upwards thinking he would bob to the surface like a cork. But when nothing like that happened, Douglas tried to yell but no sound came out. Now a great force was pulling him under. He was paralysed under water, stiff and rigid with fear. Then in the midst of the terror came a touch of reason that he should remember to jump when he hit the bottom. As soon as he felt the tiles under him he reached out his toes towards them and jumped again with all his strength. Yet again the jump did not make any difference. The water was still around him. Stark terror took an even deeper hold on him and he shook and trembled with fright. He could not move his arms and legs. He tried to call for help but nothing happened. Finally he ceased all his efforts and decided to relax as blackness swept over his brain.

Question 6 : How did Douglas' experience at the YMCA pool affect him and how did he overcome his fear of water?

Answer : Douglas' experience at the YMCA pool had a far reaching effect on him. He never went back to the pool. He feared water. He tried to avoid it whenever he could. And whenever he went to a pool, the terror that seized him in the pool would come back. His legs would become paralysed. Icy horror would grab his heart. This handicap stayed with Douglas for years. It ruined his fishing trips. He lost the joy of canoeing, boating, and swimming. William Douglas used every way to overcome his fear of water but with little success. It held him firmly in its grip. Finally, one October, he decided to employ an instructor and learn to swim. He went to a pool and practised five days a week, an hour each day. Douglas did succeed in his mission. The instructor made him an expert swimmer.

Question 7 : How did Douglas develop an aversion to water?

Answer : Douglas developed an aversion to water in his early childhood. When he was three or four years old, his father took him to a beach in California. The waves knocked him down and swept over him. He was buried in water. He was frightened and perhaps this was the moment his fear of water took root inside his mind. Further, when Douglas was ten or eleven years old, he decided to learn to swim and went to the YMCA pool. Here an incident took place that finally established his aversion to water as a big fear. One day when Douglas was alone at the pool sitting on the edge and waiting for others to come, a big boy threw him into the deep end of the pool.

What followed was a nightmarish experience for him. Douglas tried very hard and applied all his knowledge to come to the surface of the water but to no avail. Somehow he was saved. Thus after this fearful incident, his fear of water got implanted in his heart and mind permanently.

Question 8 : How did the instructor make Douglas a good swimmer?

Answer : To overcome his fear of water, Douglas finally decided to get an instructor to learn swimming. The instructor started working with him five days a week, an hour each day. The instructor put a belt around Douglas. A rope was attached to the overhead cable. The instructor held on to the end of the rope and along with Douglas went back and forth across the pool, hour after hour, day after day, week after week. On each trip across the pool a bit of panic seized Douglas. It took almost three months before the tension reduced.

Then the instructor taught him to put his face under the water and exhale and raise his nose and inhale. For weeks, his instructor made him kick with his legs. Until, he was able to command his legs at his will. In this way, piece by piece, his instructor made Douglas a swimmer. When Douglas perfected each piece, his instructor put them together into an integrated one. As a result, in nearly six months Douglas was able to swim, dive , crawl and so on.

Value Based Answer Type Questions : 6 Marks (120 – 150 Words)

Question 1 : The story ‘Deep Water’ has made you realise that with determination and perseverance one can accomplish the impossible. Write a paragraph in about 100 words on how a positive attitude and courage will aid you to achieve success in life?

Answer : Determination and perseverance is a combination of attributes and abilities that drive people to set goals for themselves and then to take the initiative to achieve these goals. Douglas was able to overcome his fear of water by the values of positive attitude and courage. Initially he was afraid of water but his grit and determination made him get an instructor to train him and overcome his fear. Determination today leads to our success tomorrow. It is that innate quality in our soul, which comes to surface when we face difficult tasks. It is a reflection of our values taught to us by society and circumstances and enables us to overcome all obstacles.

Question 2 : Roosevelt said, “All we have to fear is fear itself.” Do you agree? Why/why not?

Answer : The quote, “All we have to fear is fear itself”, by the American President, Franklin D Roosevelt, it is absolutely true. It is only the fear of consequences which prevents us from taking an action and hampers our progress. William Douglas’ fear of drowning makes him develop an aversion to water. Hence, he avoids going near water bodies or indulge in water sports. When he is able to overcome his fear with the help of the instructor, he succeeds. Likewise, there are numerous incidents around us that show how fear cripples the mind of an individual and society, and acts as a barrier to growth.

The other lessons in the textbook also support the view. The bangle makers of Firozabad in 'Lost Spring' fear that the police would put them in jail, so they accept their exploitation, and do not organise themselves into co-operatives. It is only when we are able to overcome our fear, that we can step ahead and progress in life.

The Rattrap

About the author

Selma Lagerlof (1858-1940) was a Swedish writer whose stories have been translated into many languages. This story is set in the middle of the mines of Sweden which are rich in iron ore. The story is narrated in the manner of a fairy tale. It gives us the message that the emotions of love and acceptance can reform others.

Theme

The story is about an old disheartened peddler who is taken in and shown generosity by a young woman. Her generosity and kindness change his bitter attitude towards life. The peddler is a man who has fallen upon misfortune and now resorts to selling rattraps, begging, and thievery. He is very pessimistic about the world around him and sees the world as merely a "rat trap". He believes that society tempts us with riches and fine things, and when we accept, we are caught in the trap and are left with nothing.

The story conveys a universal message that the essential goodness in a human being can be awakened through love, respect, kindness and understanding. It highlights the human predicament. Material benefits are the traps that most human beings are prone to fall into. Human beings do have a tendency to redeem themselves from dishonest ways as does the peddler at the end of the story.

Setting

This story is set amidst the mines of Sweden, rich in iron ore which figure large in the history of that country. The story is told somewhat in the manner of a fairy tale.

Characters

- A peddler with rattraps.
- An Oldman: A crofter
- Master Smith in the Ramsjo Iron Mill in Sweden
- Helpers in the Mill: blacksmiths
- Iron mill owner
- Edla Willmansson – daughter of the Iron Mill owner.

Summary

The story begins with a rattrap peddler who is in a rugged condition. He is dressed in rags and is very frail and looks starved. We learn he has no home and sometimes even begs and steals to survive in the world. He leads a lonely life with no one to care about him. One fine day, it strikes to him that this whole world is a rattrap itself. If we touch it, it will trap us and never let us go. He goes on to think that there are people out there who are already in this rattrap and reaching for the bait. On one cold evening, he reaches at a cottage to ask for shelter. An old crofter lived in that cottage who took in the peddler.

The crofter needed company, so he welcomes the peddler. He gives him hot food and even tobacco to smoke. They play cards and start talking. The peddler learns that the crofter got thirty kronor for selling his cow which he keeps in a pouch on the window frame. The peddler leaves the next day but after seeing the crofter leave his cottage, he comes back to steal the pouch of money.

After stealing it, he takes the woods to remain unsuspected. In the wood, the peddler meets an ironmaster who mistakes him to be his old comrade. He invites him over for Christmas, but he refuses. After that, the ironmaster's daughter, Edla visits him and insists him to stay with them. In between, he feels sorry for stealing the crofter's money. They help the peddler get a makeover and dress him in nice clothes and shave his beard off. After this, the ironmaster realizes he has made a mistake; the peddler was not his comrade.

Thus, the ironmaster thinks he is a fraud and decides to turn him in. However, Edla insists on letting him stay and celebrate Christmas with them. Her father agrees, and they celebrate Christmas together. Next day, the ironmaster and Edla learn that the peddler was a thief through the church about the incident at the old crofter's. They head home in a hurry thinking he must have stolen all the silver. However, to their surprise, the peddler did not steal a thing. He left a note for Edla in the form a tiny rattrap. There was also a note thanking her for her kindness which saved him from the rattrap he got caught in. Most importantly, he also left the crofter's money asking to return it to him.

To sum up, The Rattrap summary, we learn that we can change the world through kindness and compassion; in addition, it teaches us that materialistic things never bring inner joy, only love and respect does.

Gist of the lesson:

- The peddler was a vagabond who sold rattraps with a little thievery on the side to make both ends meet. Had no worldly possession to call his own, not even a name
- It amused him to think of the world as a rattrap.
- Takes shelter at a crofter's cottage. The crofter welcomed him, gave him dinner, shared his pipe, played ramjolis with him also confided in him about his income and showed him where he put it.
- Next morning, the Peddler steals the money and takes the back roads to keep away from people and gets lost in the jungle at night. While he wanders in the forest, he realizes that he has also got caught in the rattrap and that the money was the bait.
- Finally reaches Ramsjo ironworks, where he takes shelter for the night. The blacksmith and his assistant ignore him, but the master mistakes him to be an old acquaintance and invites him home. Though the Peddler does not correct the ironmaster, hoping to get some money out of him, he declines his invitation.
- The ironmaster then sends his daughter who persuades him to go home with her. She notices his uncouth appearance and thinks that either he has stolen something, or he has escaped from jail.
- The Peddler is scrubbed, bathed, given a haircut, a shave and a suit of old clothes of the ironmaster. In the morning light, the iron master realizes he is mistaken and that he is not the Captain. He wants to call the Sheriff. The peddler is agitated and breaks out that the world is rattrap and he too is sure to be caught in it. The ironmaster is amused but orders him out. The compassionate Edla convinces her father that he should spend the Christmas day with him.

- The Peddler spends the whole of Christmas Eve eating and sleeping. The next day at church, Edla and her father come to know that the Peddler is a thief who stole thirty kroners from the poor crofter.
- Back home, they found a letter addressed to Edla, signed as Captain Von Stahl and a rattrap as a gift from the crofter. In the rattrap were the three ten kroner notes of the crofter.

Textual Questions and Answers

Think-as-you-read Questions

Question 1. From where did the peddler get the idea of the world being a rattrap?

Answer: The peddler lived a dull and monotonous life. He had no family, no money and no relatives. He was a vagabond. So, being alone most of the time, he used to go on thinking. While thinking about the rattrap, he suddenly got the idea of the world being a rattrap.

Question 2. Why was the peddler amused by this idea?

Answer: The peddler had never been treated well by the world. So he felt happy thinking ill of the world. That is why he was amused by the idea that the whole world around him was nothing but a big rattrap.

Question 3. Did the peddler expect the kind of hospitality that he received from the crofter?

Answer: No, the peddler did not expect the kind of hospitality that he received from the crofter. He was always refused whenever he asked anyone for any kind of kindness. Thus, he had expected the same, but, to his surprise, the crofter treated him very kindly and gave him food and shelter.

Question 4. Why was the crofter so talkative and friendly with the peddler?

Answer: The crofter was a lonely man. He had no one in his house to give him company. He had no wife, no children. So when he saw the peddler, he was very happy to get someone to talk to.

Question 5. Why did he show the thirty kronor to the peddler?

Answer: The crofter narrated his story of living a comfortable life and having a good reasonable income that he made due to his extraordinary cow that gave a lot of milk. He told the peddler that he had earned thirty kronor last month. But the peddler expressed his disbelief. In order to make him believe, the crofter opened the pouch and showed the tramp the money.

Question 6. Did the peddler respect the confidence reposed in him by the crofter?

Answer: No, the peddler did not live up to the confidence reposed in him by the crofter. In fact, he abused the trust of the crofter. He returned after some time, opened the window of the cottage and stole the crofter's hard-earned money.

Question 7. What made the peddler think that he had indeed fallen into a rattrap?

Answer: After stealing the crofter's money, the peddler avoided the road and walked through the forest. Soon the night fell and he could not find his way out. He walked and walked without coming to the end of the wood. He finally realised that he was walking round and round the same spot. This made him frustrated and tired. Now he realised that he had indeed fallen into a rattrap.

Question 8. Why did the ironmaster speak kindly to the peddler and invite him home?

Answer: The ironmaster mistook the peddler to be his old acquaintance Nils Olof who was a captain and had resigned from the regiment long back. The ironmaster thought that the man was going through a bad phase in his life and so invited him home, especially as it was Christmas Eve.

Question 9. Why did the peddler decline the invitation?

Answer: The peddler declined the invitation, as he had stolen the money and was afraid of being caught. Accepting the invitation would be like throwing oneself voluntarily into a lion's den.

Question 10. What made the peddler accept Edla Willmansson's invitation?

Answer: Edla Willmansson came to invite the peddler with her fur coat and a valet. She spoke in a very friendly manner and he felt confidence in her. She persuaded him to come home and promised him that he would be allowed to leave whenever he would like to.

Question 11. What doubts did Edla have about the peddler?

Answer: Edla noticed that peddler was very scared. She thought he could either be a thief or an escapee from a prison.

Question 12. When did the ironmaster realize his mistake?

Answer: When the peddler was given a bath, a haircut and had a shave, the ironmaster realised at the breakfast table that the tramp did not look like his regimental comrade and that he had made a mistake.

Question 13. Why did Edla entertain the peddler even after she came to know the truth about him?

Answer: Edla was a kind lady. She empathized with the poor peddler and understood how difficult his life had been. She was able to understand his loneliness and poverty. She entertained him even though she knew who he was. Moreover, it was Christmas eve and she wanted to extend Christmas cheer and goodwill to him.

Question 14. Why was Edla happy to see the gift left by the peddler?

Answer: Edla was happy to see the gift left by the peddler because it was symbolic of the positive change in the peddler. He had left the stolen thirty kronor in the rattrap along with a letter. He had requested that the money be returned to the crofter. Edla was happy to know he had realised his mistake and made amends.

Question 15. Why did the peddler sign himself as Captain von Stahle?

Answer: The peddler was accepted and welcomed to the house as Captain von Stahle. Edla gave the peddler a kind treatment and in spite of knowing the reality, she treated him like a captain. This awakened the latent goodness of his heart and he also behaved in a dignified manner and signed himself as Captain von Stahle.

Understanding the Text

Question 1. How does the peddler interpret the acts of kindness and hospitality shown by the crofter, the ironmaster and his daughter?

Answer: The peddler was a vagabond who had no house, no family. He used to sell ratttraps. One evening when he was trudging along the road, he saw a cottage by the roadside. He knocked at the door and asked for permission for night stay at the forge. The owner of the cottage gave him shelter, food, tobacco and his company and confidences. He even showed him the thirty kronor that he had saved. But the peddler stole the money the next day, violating the trust of the crofter. Later, the peddler thought that the crofter's hospitality was a bait for him to be trapped.

Similarly, the ironmaster's hospitality also did not impress the peddler much because he was kind to him only because he thought him to be his old acquaintance. But, on the contrary, Edla's kindness and hospitality stirred up the essential goodness in him because her kindness was without any selfish motive in it like the crofter who wanted company and the ironmaster who wanted to help his old friend. Edla wanted to give some comfort and happiness to the peddler even though she knew that he was a tramp.

Question 2. What are the instances in the story that show that the character of the ironmaster is different from that of his daughter in many ways?

Answer: The ironmaster was the owner of Ramsjö Ironworks. He wanted to send good quality iron to the market. He was a very vigilant observer and hardworking and used to visit his mill even at night for supervision. He was kind and sympathetic to the peddler. But his kindness to him is due to the fact that he mistook the peddler to be his old regimental comrade Nils Olof. That is why when he came to know the truth about the peddler, he got angry and threatened to call the sheriff.

On the contrary, Edla is more observant than her father. When she saw the peddler the first time, she thought he was either a thief or a jailbreaker. But she was unlike her father. She had special sympathy for the unfortunate people. When her father, knowing the reality of the tramp, asked him to leave, Edla insisted on him to stay to spend the Christmas with them. She knew that the peddler, didn't have any place in the world and so she invited him to celebrate Christmas with them. It was only her tenderness and kind behaviour that aroused the essential goodness in the peddler.

Question 3. The story has many instances of unexpected reactions from the characters to another character's behaviour. Pick out instances of these surprises.

Answer: 'The Rattrap' deals with human emotions. These emotions, at times, give rise to unexpected behaviour. One of the most important unexpected behaviour is of the crofter towards the peddler. When the peddler asked him for shelter in the night, he welcomed him and gave him food, tobacco and company. The crofter bestowed so much confidence in the peddler that he even showed him the thirty kronor that he had saved.

In another instance, the peddler was first persuaded by ironmaster to come to his home and when he realised his mistake, he got furious and threatened to call the sheriff. Yet another and the most unexpected reaction is that of Edla Willmansson. When the peddler was asked to leave immediately, Edla closed the door and insisted that the tramp stay at their home for Christmas.

She showed extraordinary kindness to him. The most unexpected behaviour was that of the peddler. Edla's kindness brought out the essential goodness in him and he left the home leaving behind a gift for Edla along with the money he had stolen.

Question 4. What made the peddler finally change his ways?

Answer: It was ironmaster's daughter Edla's kindness and empathy that changed the peddler. Throughout his life, the peddler had never received such kindness. Initially, when Edla invited him home, she gave him the freedom to leave whenever he wanted.

Later, when the ironmaster realised his mistake, he wanted to call the sheriff but out of kindness allowed him to leave. But Edla closed the door and insisted on him to stay for Christmas. Her kindness brought out the essential goodness in the tramp. Edla not only served him good food and looked after him very well, but she also offered him to come to their house every Christmas. This generous and kind nature worked as a catalyst to bring about a positive change in the peddler. Thus, by returning the stolen money along with a rattrap as a Christmas present along with a note for Edla, the peddler left the house honourably.

Question 5. How does the metaphor of the rattrap serve to highlight the human predicament?

Answer: The story deals with the metaphor of 'Rattrap'. It refers to the theory that life is one big rattrap. It exists for a purpose to set baits for people. It offers riches and joys, luxuries and comforts, food and shelter, heat and clothing exactly as a rattrap offers cheese and pork. The moment anyone lets himself be tempted to touch the bait, it closes on him and then everything comes to an end. The peddler in the story was caught into the trap by the hospitality received at the crofter. His extreme poverty forced him to steal the money. He was at this moment caught into the trap of his own guilt.

Even at the ironmaster's house he is caught in his own trap. But it is Edla's extreme kindness and generosity which enabled him to come out of this trap of his and leave the house as a freeman, after confessing his wrong deed and leaving the stolen money. Thus, the metaphor of rattrap very aptly highlights the fact that if you take something you want wrongfully, you will usually get trapped in life.

Question 6. The peddler comes out as a person with subtle sense of humour. How does this serve in lightening the seriousness of the theme of the story and also endear him to the reader?

Answer: The peddler is one of the most interesting characters in this story. His theory of rattrap is an excellent example of humour in the story. The very idea of comparing a man's greed for money and wealth to a rat which hungrily looks around for food and finally gets in the trap, evokes humour. Moreover, the tramp himself committed the same error by stealing the crofter's money is so ironical. The peddler's attempt not to undeceive the ironmaster, despite being afraid to accept the invitation, is very comical. Some of the other funny scenes are when he displayed his smartness after he was recognised by the ironmaster. The display of his anger and frustration at the point when the ironmaster threatened to call the police is also very humorous. In spite of all the things that he did, he came out to be a very lovable character and endears us when he confessed his guilt and left the house in an honourable manner leaving the stolen money, a note and a Christmas gift for Edla.

Talking About The Text

Question 1. The reader's sympathy is with the peddler right from the beginning of the story. Is the sympathy justified?

Answer: 'The Rattrap' is written in the backdrop of industrial revolution in Sweden in the second half of the nineteenth century. Many families were displaced by the growing industry and some people were reduced to a life of extreme poverty. The peddler in the story was a victim of such an economic change. He managed his life by begging and stealing. The pitiable state in which he was living evokes the sympathy of the reader. Even when he stole the money of the crofter, we don't consider him to be a criminal. It was taken as a normal reaction of a poor man when he saw so much money easily available to him.

Thus, the peddler's extreme poverty and the circumstances in which he lived, justifiably make the reader sympathetic to him from the beginning of the story.

Question 2. 'The Rattrap' focuses on human loneliness and the need to bond with others. Comment.

Answer: No doubt the story focuses on human loneliness and the need to bond with others. The protagonist of the story, i.e. the peddler, was a vagabond who had no family and led a lonely life. As he had no companion to talk to, he was left to his own meditations. The crofter was also a lonely man with no wife or children. When he saw the peddler, he was happy to get someone to talk to. That is why he treated him with good food and tobacco. Moreover, the ironmaster and his daughter Edla too were leading a lonely life. The ironmaster's wife died long ago, and his sons lived abroad. They had no family and friends to celebrate Christmas.

Thus, the story deals with the loneliness of human beings in different situations and their struggle to cope with loneliness.

Question 3. The story is both entertaining and philosophical.

Answer: 'The Rattrap' has both entertaining and philosophical aspects. The very title of the story is metaphorical. It refers to the theory that life is a big rattrap and sets baits for people. Instead of cheese and pork, life offers riches and joys, luxuries, food, shelter, etc. As soon as a human being gets tempted to touch the bait, it closes on him. The peddler got trapped in such a situation when he stole the money of the crofter.

Despite the philosophical aspect of the story, it always remains interesting and binds the reader till the end. The character of the peddler is so entertaining. The very idea of the peddler himself falling into the trap is humorous. The story has a clear and excellent progression of the theme. There is always an element of curiosity. The climax of the story is enthralling. When Edla and ironmaster come back from the church with an idea that the peddler must have taken away all the silver, they find a gift and the stolen money left by him.

Thus, the story is narrated in such a style that it entertains the reader, besides providing a philosophical insight into life.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks; 30-40 words)

Question.1. In what sense was the world a big rattrap according to the peddler?

or

Why did the peddler think that the world was a rattrap?

Answer. The peddler was an extremely poor man who earned his living by selling rattraps he made himself from the materials he got by begging. His mind, thus, was always preoccupied with rattraps. One day, he suddenly thought of the whole world was a big rattrap. He felt that the shelter, food, clothes, riches and joys that the world provided were all baits set to entrap man just as a rattrap offered cheese or meat to entrap rats. As soon as one was trapped, everything came to an end.

Question.2. Why did the peddler derive pleasure from his idea of the world as a rattrap?

Answer. The world had never been kind to the poor peddler. Wherever he went, he was greeted with sour faces and was turned or chased away. Therefore, he derived pleasure from thinking ill of the world in this way. Moreover, he perhaps envied those whose lot was better than his and was rather amused to think that someday they too would be tempted by the bait and be caught in the Rattrap.

Question.3. Why did the peddler knock on the cottage by the roadside? How was he treated by the Owner Of the cottage?

Answer. The peddler knocked on the cottage by the roadside to seek shelter for the night. The owner of the cottage was a crofter who lived there alone. He regarded the peddler as welcome company and treated him quite hospitably. He not only put him up for the night, but also offered him food and played cards with him.

Question.4. Why did Edla plead with her father not to send the vagabond away?

or

Why did Edla still entertain the peddler even after she knew the truth about him?

Answer. Edla had always thought the peddler to be a poor, homeless tramp. Therefore, she didn't feel cheated when his true identity was revealed. Instead, she felt very bad for him and his miserable condition and pleaded on his behalf. She and her father had promised him Christmas cheer, and she felt that it would be wrong to send him away.

Question.5. What conclusion did the ironmaster reach when he heard that the crofter had been robbed by the peddler?

Answer. It was at the church that the ironmaster and his daughter heard that the crofter had been robbed by a peddler, who, no doubt, was the one they had sheltered at the manor house. The ironmaster at once concluded that the peddler would probably have stolen all his silverware in their absence and ran away.

Question.6. What was the content of the letter written by the peddler to Edla?

Answer. The peddler had written that since Edla had treated him like a captain, he wanted to be nice to her in return. He did not want her to be embarrassed at Christmas by a thief. He had requested that the crofter's money that he had stolen be returned. He further wrote that the rattrap was a Christmas present from a rat who would have been caught in the world's rattrap, if he had not been raised to the status of captain, which motivated him to reform himself.

Question.7. What were the contents of the package left by the peddler as Christmas gift for Edla Willmansson?

Answer. The package left by the peddler as a Christmas gift for Edla Willmansson comprised a small rattrap with three wrinkled ten kronor notes in it, which the peddler had robbed from the crofter. It also contained a brief letter for Edla explaining the peddler's conduct.

Question.8. Why did the peddler decline the invitation of the ironmaster?

Answer. The ironmaster has mistaken the peddler for an old regimental comrade and invited him home. The peddler declined the invitation because he was carrying the money he had stolen from the crofter. He knew that if the ironmaster discovered his identity, he would hand him over to the police. Therefore, for him, going to the manor house was like walking into a lion's den.

Question.9. Who was the owner of Ramsjo iron mills? Why did he visit the mills at night?

Answer. The owner of the Ramsjo iron mills was an ex-army man and an ambitious and prominent ironmaster. He was very particular about the quality of his products and visited the mills even at night to make sure that good iron was shipped out from his mills.

Question.10. How did the ironmaster react on seeing the stranger lying close to the furnace?

Answer. When the ironmaster saw a stranger in rags lying close to the furnace, he went near him and removed his slouch hat to get a better view of his face. Due to dim light in the forge and the peddler's dirty appearance, he mistook him to be Nils Olof, an old acquaintance of his regiment. He was delighted to see him and invited him home for Christmas.

Question.11. Why did the stranger not tell the ironmaster that he was not Nils Olof?

Answer. The stranger did not tell the ironmaster that he was not Nils Olof because he thought that if the gentleman believed that he was an old friend or acquaintance of his, then he might take pity on him and help him with some money.

Question.12. Why was the crofter so talkative and friendly with the peddler?

Answer. The old crofter was lonely and leading a dreary existence as he had no wife or children. He was happy to get someone to talk to and share his thoughts with, even though it was a tramp. So he welcomed the peddler who was quite a patient listener, and extended his hospitality to him.

Question.13. Why was the peddler surprised when he knocked on the door of the cottage?

Answer. The peddler had never been treated kindly by the world. He was meted out cold treatment wherever he went. He was pleasantly surprised when the crofter greeted him with warmth and hospitality. Ordinarily, he always met 'sour faces' when he knocked for shelter and food, and was usually turned away.

Question.14. Why did the peddler keep to the woods after leaving the crofter's cottage? How did he feel?

Answer. After stealing the money from the crofter's, the peddler was cautious to avoid the public, highway lest he be identified and caught. He got into the woods but finally realised that it was a big and confusing forest. The end of the forest was nowhere in sight and he felt lost. That's when he recalled his thoughts about the world being a rattrap and he realised that he had indeed become a victim of a rattrap.

Question.15. What made the peddler finally change his ways?

Answer. The peddler believed in giving back to the world what he received from it. He was always treated with contempt and hostility and so he never did anything good. However, Edla's kind and caring behaviour finally changed him. She had treated him with love and respect befitting a captain, even after realising that he was a poor vagabond. The trust that Edla showed in him made him change his ways and he decided to live with dignity and respect.

Question.16. Why was Edla happy to see the gift left by the peddler?

Answer. Edla felt very dejected when she came to know about the theft of the crofter's money by the peddler, but the gift left behind, which consisted of a small rattrap and three wrinkled ten kronor notes, restored her faith in him. She felt happy because her trust in him had been justified. Her kindness had finally changed the peddler and brought out his essential goodness.

Question.17. "Edla sat and hung her head even more dejectedly than usual." Which two reasons forced her to behave in that manner?

Answer. Edla had shown kindness to the peddler even after knowing that he was not a captain. This was the reason why she felt all the more dejected when she came to know that the peddler whom she had sheltered was actually a thief, who had recently robbed a crofter. Secondly, she also felt bad because the peddler had disproved the faith which she had shown in him.

Question.18. Why did the peddler sign himself as Captain von Stahle?

Answer. The peddler owed his transformation to the kind treatment meted out to him by Edla. In spite of knowing the truth about him, she had honoured and treated him like a captain. She had awakened the latent goodness in his heart. He wanted to repay Edla for her kindness. His signing himself as Captain von Stahle shows that he wanted to retain the dignity and respect accorded to him.

Long Answer Type Questions (6 Marks, 120-150 words)

Question.1. How did the peddler feel after robbing the crofter? What course did he adopt and how did he react to the new situation? What does his reaction reveal?

Answer. The crofter had treated the peddler with hospitality and had even reposed his trust in the poor vagabond. Still the peddler robbed him and was quite pleased with his smartness. However, the fear of getting caught haunted him. So, he avoided the public highway and turned into the woods. It was a big and confusing forest, and due to the approaching darkness, the peddler lost his way. He got exhausted moving around the same place and was filled with despair. He began to feel that the forest was like a big rattrap and the thirty kronor he had stolen were like a bait set to tempt him. His reaction reveals that he was feeling guilty for having stolen the crofter's money. His heart was filled with remorse and self-loathing for his act of weakness. However, his thoughts are perhaps also a way of justifying his crime.

Question.2. The story, 'The Rattrap' is both entertaining and philosophical. Do you agree with this statement? Why/Why not?

Answer. The story, 'The Rattrap' is indeed, both entertaining and philosophical. The fast-paced narrative in the third person, generous use of dialogue by the author and different characters belonging to different mindsets and locales make the story interesting and entertaining. Besides, the author has managed to keep up the suspense till the end. The incidents in the forge, with the ironmaster coming at midnight, hold our attention. The peddler's incessant refusals to the ironmaster to accompany him, but his accepting Edla's invitation in one go, the ironmaster's realisation of his mistake, and Edla's sympathy and generosity, all make the story quite gripping. While all the above events make the story interesting, there is also an element of philosophy in the story. Somewhere, the peddler's theory of the world being a rattrap is true. One feels caught up like a rat in the entrappings of the world. Some people fall into this trap never to come out of it again. The story teaches us that, as human beings, we are not above temptations.

Question.3. The story focuses on human loneliness and the need to bond with others. Explain.

Answer. All the characters in the story suffer from loneliness and are dreary souls. First, the tramp appears to lead a sad, monotonous existence, left to his own musings. He is always greeted by sour faces and cold words. The old crofter's fate has been somewhat kinder to him. Bereft of his wife and children, he lives all alone in a cottage by the roadside and is rather happy to have visitors around. We also have the ironmaster and his daughter, Edla, who have no company for Christmas. The ironmaster's wife is dead, and his sons are settled abroad. He, with his daughter, are happy to play hosts for his friend. Thus, all of them have a strong desire for bonding and comradeship. The crofter is happy to be friends with the peddler, although only for a night. It is the bonding with the ironmaster's daughter that transforms the peddler. The love, understanding and dignity that he gets from the girl makes him leave his dishonest ways and redeem himself.

Question.4. Give examples from the story, 'The Rattrap' to show how the ironmaster is different from his daughter.

or
Compare and contrast the character of the ironmaster with that of his daughter.

Answer. The character of the ironmaster was quite different from that of his daughter. He was an ambitious and arrogant man. When he saw the peddler, he mistook him for his old regimental comrade, and invited him home, but this was more out of his sense of pride than out of sympathy or generosity. When the ironmaster realised that he had been mistaken, he called the peddler dishonest and threatened to call the Sheriff. When he learnt that the peddler was a thief, he was ‘worried about his own silverware. On the other hand, Edla, the ironmaster’s daughter, was a kind and compassionate lady who was really sympathetic and considerate towards the peddler right from the beginning. She treated him with respect and dignity even after knowing that he was not a captain. It was her generous attitude which finally changed the peddler, bringing out the essential goodness of his nature.

SUMMARY

Gandhi had gone to the December 1916 annual convention of the Indian National Congress in Lucknow where he made a poor peasant named Rajkumar Shukla who pleaded Gandhi to visit Champaran. Under an old agreement the peasants of the Champaran district were sharecroppers.

Rajkumar Shukla was one of them who was determined enough to accompany Gandhi everywhere till he fixed a date to visit his district. Impressed by the resolution of the peasant, Gandhi agreed to meet him in Calcutta and go with him to Champaran from there. After a few months when Gandhi went to Calcutta, Shukla met him there and took him to Patna with him. There Shukla took him to meet with a lawyer named Rajendra Prasad who later became the President of the Congress Party and of India. Rajendra Prasad was not there to welcome him, but the servants recognized Shukla as a sharecropper who needed help and let him inside the house with Gandhi who was also considered another peasant. However, Gandhi was not allowed to draw water from the well as they thought that he might turn out to be an untouchable.

Gandhi decided to go to Muzzafarpur to gather more information about the condition of the peasants in Champaran. He sent a telegram to Professor J.B. Kripalani, of the Arts College in Muzzafarpur. When Gandhi reached the station, Kripalani was waiting with a large number of students. Gandhi stayed with Professor Malkani for two days and appreciated him for being courageous enough to harbour a person like him who was fighting for the country's freedom, despite being a government official. The news of Gandhi's advent and his mission spread rapidly through Muzzafarpur and Champaran. Gandhi came to know that the lawyers were charging a fee from the peasants. Gandhi advised them against taking their cases to the law court as he felt that all that was needed was to make them feel liberated from fear. Most of the arable lands in the Champaran district were divided into estates owned by Englishmen who employed Indian tenants to work for them. The peasants were forced to be a part of a long-term contract to plant fifteen percent of their land with indigo. When the landlords got to know that Germany had developed synthetic indigo, they compelled the sharecroppers to pay them compensation for being released from the 15 percent agreement. When the sharecroppers protested against this injustice and hired lawyers to fight for them, the landlords hired thugs. Meanwhile, the news of the synthetic indigo reached the illiterate peasants who had already signed and wanted their money back. Gandhi had arrived to Champaran at this point of time and he decided to get his facts right before proceeding to do anything. He visited the secretary of the British landlord's association who refused to give information to an outsider, to which Gandhi replied that he was no outsider. Next, he called the British official commissioner of the Tirhut division who advised Gandhi to leave Tirhut immediately.

Gandhi proceeded to Motihari with several lawyers where he was greeted by a vast crowd and found out that a peasant had been maltreated. He decided to pay and visit. On his way he was stopped by the police superintendent's messenger who warned him to leave the town. The messenger served Gandhi an official notice to quit Champaran immediately. Gandhi signed a receipt for the notice and wrote on it that he would disobey the order. He was summoned to court the next day. That night Gandhi telegraphed Rajendra Prasad to come from Bihar with influential friends, sent instructions to the ashram and forwarded a full report to the viceroy. In the morning, Motihari was swarming with peasants. They had only heard that some Mahatma who wanted to help them, was in trouble with the British authorities. This spontaneous courage to support Gandhi and to stand up against the British marked the beginning of their freedom from their fear of the British.

The officials were unable to handle the crowd without Gandhi's cooperation. Perplexed by this incident that served as a proof that the British would be challenged by the Indians, the prosecutor requested the judge to postpone the trial. But Gandhi protested against the delay and read a statement pleading guilty. He was in a conflicting state of being. On one hand, he did not want to set a bad example as a lawbreaker and on the other hand, he had to follow his conscience to stand up for his people. The magistrate asked Gandhi to furnish bail for 120 minutes during the recess, but Gandhi refused. Finally, the judge released him without bail.

Rajendra Prasad, Brij Kishor Babu, Maulana Mazhatul Huq and other prominent lawyers had arrived from Bihar. Gandhi demanded that the lawyers should fight against the injustice if he went to jail. They thought that if a stranger like Gandhi was prepared to go to jail for the peasants then it would be a shame if they did not contribute their bit. Finally, they assured Gandhi that they were ready to follow him to jail. The unity and courage of the people to stand up against the British made Gandhi exclaim- "The battle of Champaran is won."

Several days later, Gandhi learnt from the magistrate that the case against him was ordered to be dropped. For this first time, civil disobedience had triumphed in modern India.

Gandhi delved deep into the enquiry and collected relevant documents from the peasants which led the landlords to protest violently. In June, Gandhi had four interviews with the Lieutenant Governor. The appointed commission consisted of landlords, government officials and Gandhi, as the only representative of the sharecroppers. Finally, the committee agreed to reimburse the peasants as a mountain of evidence was gathered against the planters. Everyone thought that Gandhi would ask for the full refund but to everyone's surprise, he only asked for 50 percent of the money that the landlords had illegally taken from the peasants. However, he finally settled for only 25 percent. Gandhi felt that the money was less important than the fact that the landlords had to submit to the peasants. They had to surrender their self-esteem. Also, the peasants realized their rights and became more courageous to stand up against injustice.

Within a few years, the British planters left their estates because of which indigo sharecropping disappeared. Gandhi saw the cultural and social backwardness in Champaran and felt like doing something for its upliftment. He requested twelve teachers to teach the people at Champaran. Two young disciples of Gandhi, Mahadev Desai and Narhari Parikh and their wives volunteered for the work. Gandhi's youngest son, Devadas and his wife also joined in. Kasturbai educated the village about ashram rules on personal cleanliness and community sanitation. Gandhi got a doctor to serve the community for six months. Castor oil, quinine and sulphur ointment were available. Gandhi maintained communication with the ashram and sent regular instructions and asked for financial accounts. The Champaran movement had a deep impact on Gandhi's life as it made it evident that the British could not order Indians in their own country. It was not a political agenda to begin a movement by defying the British. The Champaran movement grew out of an attempt to release the tension of the poor peasants. Politics, for Gandhi, was intertwined with the day-to-day problems of the ordinary mass. Gandhi's attempt was to mould a self-reliant India. When Gandhi's lawyer friends thought that it was a good idea to have the English pacifist, Charles Freer Andrews, stay in Champaran and help, Gandhi refused. He said that having an Englishman by their side in the time when every Indian should be strong and self-reliant, would just indicate the weakness of their minds. Rajendra Prasad proudly comments that Gandhi had successfully taught everyone a lesson in self-reliance.

Short Answer Type Questions (3 Marks, 30-40 words)

Question.1. Why did Gandhiji feel that taking the Champaran case to court was useless?

Answer. When Gandhiji got to know about the plight of the peasant groups in Champaran from his discussion with the lawyers, he came to the conclusion that the poor peasants were so crushed and fear-stricken that law courts were useless in their case. Going to courts overburdened the sharecroppers with heavy litigation expenses. What really needed to be done was to make them free from fear.

Question.2. How did the Champaran peasants react when they heard that a Mahatma had come to help them?

Answer. When the Champaran peasants heard that a Mahatma had come to help them, they assembled in Motihari in large number. Thousands of peasants held a demonstration around the courthouse where Gandhiji was supposed to appear. The crowd was so uncontrollable that the officials felt powerless, and Gandhiji himself helped the authorities to regulate the crowd.

Question.3. What made the Lieutenant Governor drop the case against Gandhiji?

Answer. When Gandhiji was asked to appear in the court in Motihari, thousands of peasants held a demonstration around the courthouse. The officials felt helpless and the government was baffled. The trial was postponed, as the judge did not want to aggravate the situation. He held up the sentence for several days, after which Gandhiji was released without bail. All these events made the Lieutenant Governor drop the case against Gandhiji.

Question.4. Why did Gandhiji oppose when his friend Andrews offered to stay in Champaran and help the peasants?

Why did Gandhiji object to CF Andrews' stay in Champaran?

Answer. CF Andrews, an English pacifist, was a devoted follower of Gandhiji. The lawyers thought that being an Englishman, Andrews could be of immense help to them in their cause of fighting the battle of Champaran. Gandhiji, however, was against this because he felt that enlisting an Englishman's help showed weakness. Their cause was just, and they had to win the battle by relying on themselves. This would make them self-reliant.

Question.5. Why do you think Gandhi considered the Champaran episode to be a turning point in his life?

Answer. The Champaran episode began as an attempt to alleviate the distress of poor peasants. Ultimately it proved to be a turning point in Gandhiji's life because it was a loud proclamation that made the British realise that Gandhiji could not be ordered about in his own country. It infused courage to question British authority in the masses and laid the foundation of non-cooperation as a new tool to fight the British tooth and nail.

Question.6. What did the peasants pay to the British landlords as rent?

Answer. The British landlords had entered a long-term contract with the farmers according to which they compelled all tenants to plant 15% of their holdings with indigo. The sharecroppers had to surrender the entire indigo harvest as rent.

Question.7. Why did Gandhiji decide to go to Muzaffarpur before going to Champaran?

Answer. Rajkumar Shukla had given quite a lot of information to Gandhiji about the indigo sharecroppers of Champaran. However, Gandhiji wished to obtain more complete information about the conditions than Shukla had imparted. He visited Muzaffarpur, which was en route to Champaran, to inquire from the lawyers there about the issue, as they frequently represented the peasant groups in the court.

Question.8. Why do you think the servants thought Gandhi to be another peasant?

Answer. The servants knew that Rajkumar Shukla was a poor farmer who pestered their master to help the indigo sharecroppers. Since Gandhiji accompanied Shukla and was dressed simply, they mistook him for a peasant. Gandhiji's modesty and unassertiveness also led to the assumption that he was a peasant.

Question.9. "The battle of Champaran is won!" What led Gandhiji to make this remark?

Answer. The lawyers first decided to return home if Gandhiji was arrested. But they soon realised their mistake. When they declared that they would fight for the peasants' cause in the event of Gandhiji's arrest and volunteered to court arrest for the cause of the sharecroppers, Gandhiji was very pleased and exclaimed, "The battle of Champaran is won!"

Question.10. Why did Gandhi agree to the planters' offer of a 25% refund to the farmers?

Answer. Gandhiji agreed to a settlement of 25% refund to the farmers to break the deadlock between the landlords and peasants. For him, the amount of the refund was not very important. The fact that the landlords had been obliged to surrender a part of their money as well as their prestige gave a moral victory to the farmers. Thus, Gandhiji not only made the landlords accept their dishonesty but also made the farmers learn a lesson in defending their rights with courage.

Question.11. How was Gandhi able to influence the lawyers? Give instances.

How was Gandhiji able to influence the lawyers?

Answer. Gandhiji's sincerity towards the peasants' cause and convincing arguments and negotiations, thoroughly influenced the lawyers. He chided them for overcharging the peasants and encouraged them to court arrest for the peasants' noble cause. He even rejected their proposal to seek Mr Andrews help in their battle against the Britishers to be self-reliant and independent.

Long Answer Type Questions (6 Marks, 120-150 Words)

Question.1. Why is the Champaran episode considered to be the beginning of the Indian struggle for independence?

Answer. The Champaran episode was one of the major events in the struggle for independence. It was in the course of this small but significant movement that Gandhiji decided to urge the departure of the British from India.

A close examination of the problems of the Champaran peasants opened Gandhiji's eyes to the unjust policies of the British. He realised that people had to be made free from fear and only then could they be freed from foreign oppression. The spontaneous demonstration of the people proved that Gandhiji had the nation's support in his fight against the Britishers. It also aroused patriotism in the heart of the Indians. The triumph of The. Civil disobedience at Champaran motivated the launching of the movement on a large scale during the freedom movement. Gandhiji's winning the case of the sharecroppers proved that British authority could be challenged. Hence, the Champaran episode served as a steppingstone to the Indian struggle for independence.

Question.2. Gandhiji's loyalty was not a loyalty to abstractions; it was a loyalty to living human beings. Why did Gandhiji continue his stay in Champaran even after indigo sharecropping disappeared?

Answer. After the Champaran battle was won and the land reverted to the peasants, Gandhiji continued to stay on in the region. His loyalty was, indeed, to living human beings and he realised that a lot needed to be done for the upliftment of the peasants in the villages of Champaran. Gandhiji took the initiative and began the work of eradicating their cultural and social backwardness. Primary schools were started so that the poor peasants and their children could be educated. Gandhiji appealed to teachers, and many of his disciples, including his wife and son, volunteered for the work. Health conditions in the area were also miserable. Gandhiji got a doctor to volunteer his services for six months. All this goes to prove that Gandhiji's loyalty was not to abstractions, but his politics was always intertwined with the practical day to day problems of the millions.

Question.3. Describe how, according to Louis Fischer, Gandhiji succeeded in his Champaran campaign.

Answer. The Champaran campaign was an attempt to free the poor peasants of Champaran from injustice and exploitation at the hands of the Britishers. Gandhiji succeeded in this campaign using his method of satyagraha and non-violence. He visited Muzaffarpur to obtain complete information about the actual condition of the sharecroppers. He first appealed to the concerned authorities, but when there was no positive response, he organised a mass civil disobedience movement with the support of the peasants. Gandhiji's main objective was to remove the fear of the British landlords from the heart of the poor peasants and mould a new free Indian, who could participate in the freedom movement of the country. He made the peasants aware of their rights and gave them a new-found confidence for fighting their own battles. He also taught them to be self-reliant by refusing to take the help of CF Andrews, his English friend.

Question.4. Why did Gandhiji agree to a settlement of 25% refund to the farmers? How did it influence the peasant-landlord relationship in Champaran?

Answer. Under an ancient arrangement, the peasants of Champaran were sharecroppers. The landlords forced the Indian tenants to plant 15% of their holding with indigo and surrender the entire indigo harvest as rent. After Germany developed synthetic indigo, the landlords wanted to dissolve the agreement, as synthetic indigo would be cheaper. They asked the peasants for compensation to release them from this arrangement. Most of them signed it willingly but felt cheated after they learned about synthetic indigo.

Gandhiji fought their case and the evidence that he collected was so overwhelming that the landlords were asked to repay. When Gandhiji asked for 50% repayment, the landlords offered to pay only 25%, as they wanted to create a deadlock, and thus prolong the dispute. To everybody surprise, Gandhiji agreed to a refund of only 25%. Gandhiji explained that the amount of refund was not important. What mattered was that the landlords were obliged to surrender a part of their money and with it, part of their prestige.

Question.5. Give an account of Gandhiji's efforts to secure justice for the poor indigo sharecroppers of Champaran.

Answer. During his journey to Champaran with Rajkumar Shukla, Gandhiji stayed at Muzaffarpur where he met the lawyers and concluded that fighting through courts was not going to solve the problem of the poor sharecroppers of Champaran. He declared that the real relief for them was to be free from fear.

With this intention, he arrived in Champaran and contacted the Secretary of the British Landlord's association. The Secretary refused to provide him any information. After this, Gandhiji met the Commissioner of the Tirhut division who served a notice on him to immediately leave Tirhut. Gandhiji accepted the notice by signing it and wrote on it that he would not obey the order. He was even willing to court arrest for the cause of the peasants.

After four rounds of talks with-the Governor, an official commission of inquiry was appointed in which Gandhiji was made the sole representative of the peasants. Through this commission Gandhiji succeeded in getting 25% of the compensation award for the poor sharecroppers from the British landowners.

Question.6. The Champaran episode was a turning point in Gandhiji's life. Elucidate.

Answer. Gandhiji himself accepted the proposition that the Champaran episode was a turning point in his life. It was then that he decided to urge the departure of the British from India. In fact the Champaran episode was the first experiment of civil disobedience in India. When Gandhiji was on his way to Champaran, he stayed in Muzaffarpur, where he met the lawyers who were fighting cases for the sharecroppers. The peasants were so crushed, and fear stricken. that Gandhiji concluded that law courts were useless. The real relief for them was to be free from fear. The spontaneous demonstration by the peasants showed that they were instilled with a new strength and spirit. Gandhiji showed the poor peasants how to fight the British with ‘satyagraha’. He made them aware of their power and the power of ahimsa. All this laid the foundation of his future movements and served as a great source of strength and motivation for all Indians.

Answer: Shukla led Gandhi to Rajendra Prasad’s house. The servants knew Shukla as a poor villager. Gandhi was also clad in a simple dhoti. He was the companion of a peasant. Hence, the servants thought Gandhi to be another peasant.

Ques: List the places that Gandhi visited between his first meeting with Shukla and his arrival at Champaran.

Answer: Gandhi’s first meeting with Shukla was at Lucknow. Then he went to Cawnpore and other parts of India. He returned to his ashram near Ahmedabad. Later he went to Calcutta, Patna and Muzaffarpur before arriving at Champaran.

Ques: What did the peasants pay the British landlords as rent? What did the British now want instead and why? What would be the impact of synthetic indigo on the prices of natural indigo?

Answer: The peasants paid the British landlords indigo as rent. Now Germany had developed synthetic indigo. So, the British landlords wanted money as compensation for being released from the 15 percent arrangement. The prices of natural indigo would go down due to the synthetic Indigo.

Ques: The events in this part of the text illustrate Gandhi's method of working. Can you identify some instances of this method and link them to his ideas of Satyagraha and non-violence?

Answer: Gandhi's politics was intermingled with the day-to-day problems of the millions of Indians. He opposed unjust laws. He was ready to court arrest for breaking such laws and going to jail. The famous Dandi March to break the 'salt law' is another instance. The resistance and disobedience were peaceful and a fight for truth and justice... This was linked directly to his ideas of Satyagraha and non-violence.

Ques: Why did Gandhi agree to a settlement of a 25 percent refund to the farmers?

Answer: For Gandhi, the amount of the refund was less important than the fact that the landlords had been forced to return part of the money, and with it, part of their prestige too. So, he agreed to a settlement of a 25 percent refund to the farmers.

Ques: How did the episode change the plight of the peasants?

Answer: The peasants were saved from spending time and money on court cases. After some years, the British planters gave up control of their estates. These now reverted to the peasants. Indigo sharecropping disappeared.

Ques: Why do you think Gandhi considered the Champaran episode to be a turning- point in his life?

Answer: The Champaran episode began as an attempt to ease the sufferings of a large number of poor peasants. He got spontaneous support from thousands of people. Gandhi admits that what he had done was a very ordinary thing. He declared that the British could not order him in his own country. Hence, he considered the Champaran episode as a turning- point in his life.

Ques: How was Gandhi able to influence lawyers? Give instances.

Answer: Gandhi asked the lawyers what they would do if he was sentenced to prison. They said that they had come to advise him. If he went to jail, they would go home. Then Gandhi asked them about the injustice to the sharecroppers. The lawyers held consultations. They concluded that it would be shameful desertion if they went home. So, they told Gandhi that they were ready to follow him into jail.

Ques: “What was the attitude of the average Indian in smaller localities towards advocates of ‘home rule’?”

Answer: The average Indians in smaller localities were afraid to show sympathy for the advocates of home-rule. Gandhi stayed at Muzaffarpur for two days at the home of Professor Malkani, a teacher in a government school. It was an extraordinary thing in those days for a government professor to give shelter to one who opposed the government.

Ques: How do we know that ordinary people too contributed to the freedom movement?

Answer: Professor J.B. Kriplani received Gandhi at Muzaffarpur railway station at midnight. He had a large body of students with him. Sharecroppers from Champaran came on foot and by conveyance to see Gandhi. Muzaffarpur lawyers too called on him. A vast multitude greeted Gandhi when he reached Motihari railway station. Thousands of people demonstrated around the courtroom. This shows that ordinary people too contributed to the freedom movement in India.

Ques: Discuss the following:

“Freedom from fear is more important than Legal justice for the poor.”

Do you think that the poor of India are free from fear after Independence?

Answer: For the poor of India means of survival is far more important than freedom or legal justice. I do not think the poor of India are free from fear after Independence. The foreign rulers have been replaced by corrupt politicians and self-serving bureaucracy. Power-brokers and moneylenders have a field day. The situation has improved in cities and towns for the poor but the poor in the remote villages still fear the big farmers and moneylenders. The police and revenue officials are still objecting of terror for them.

The poor, landless workers must still work hard to make both ends meet. Peasants and tenant-farmers must borrow money from rich moneylenders on exorbitant rates of interest, which usually they fail to repay due to the failure of monsoon or bad crops. Cases of small farmers committing suicide are quite common. If this is not due to fear, what is the reason behind it?

The qualities of a good leader.

Answer: A good leader has a mass appeal. He rises from the masses, thinks for them, and works for them. He is sincere in his approach. He is a man of principles. Truth, honesty, patriotism, morality, the spirit of service, and sacrifice are the hallmarks of a good leader. He never mixes politics with religion or sect. He believes in working for the welfare of the nation and does not think in the narrow terms of class, caste, or region. Corruption and nepotism are two evils that surround a leader in power. The life of a good leader is an open book. There is no difference between his words and actions. Such good leaders are exceedingly rare. What we find today are practical politicians, who think of achieving their end without bothering about the purity of means. The law of expediency gets the better of morality.

VISTAS

THE THIRD LEVEL

Introduction

The past is a good place to visit, but certainly not a good place to stay. The Third Level by Jack Finney is an engrossing story set in the 1950s. The story is studded with numerous undertones of irony. It takes you back in time. It was a world when people hadn't seen two of the bloodiest wars in the history of mankind. The story brings to light the fact that figments of someone's imagination can be used for shying away from reality, which in all fairness, is harsh enough. Let us take a closer look at the story.

Overview

The Third Level tells the story of a 31-year-old guy named Charlie (not Charlie Sheen). One fine evening, while rushing home, he decides to take the subway from the Grand Central Station in New York City. He ends up finding himself on the Third Level of the Grand Central Station (there were only two levels). There, Charlie observes spittoons lying on the floor. He observes that people wear wearing derby hats and gold watches, which they kept in their vest pockets. He also sees a Currier & Ives locomotive.

Realising that he's gone back in time, Charlie tries to buy tickets to Galesburg. During the lunch hour, the next afternoon, Charlie withdraws all his savings (nearly 500 US Dollars) to buy old style currency notes. Charlie narrates this incident to Sam, his friend who works as a psychiatrist. Sam concludes that the Third Level is nothing but a mere figment of Charlie's imagination. The miseries which the modern world, full of war, worry and terror, had to offer made Charlie hallucinate about the existence of the Third Level.

Charlie succeeds in finding an evidence related to the Third Level's existence. He discovers a letter addressed to him by his psychiatrist friend Sam. The letter was dated July 18, 1894. It seemed that Sam wasn't as incredulous of the Third Level as he had appeared to be.

The story clearly explores the concept of time travel. Jack Finney explores the mentality of a common man. He succeeds in exposing the vulnerable side of a common man. A myriad of problems conspired to corrupt Charlie's mind. It further robbed him of his senses, and in his panic induced state, he hallucinated about the Third Level at the Grand Central Station. Even though it was hard for Charlie to believe his eyes, he decided to stay there, in the year 1894.

What stands out in the entire story is the extent of ease with which Jack Finney was able to bring out a common man's craving for peace and security. Like any common man, Charlie too appreciated the so-called 'pleasures' of everyday life and the security of the familiar. He wanted to stay in the past because 1894 was much more peaceful, secure, serene. The world in 1894 hadn't seen the repercussions of war. The insecurities that came with war, terror, and disease had got the better of common folks like Charlie who wanted a transient relief from the harsh realities of life.

All in all, The Third Level brings us to the conclusion that people find it hard to make peace with unpleasant things they come across in life. The story further makes the reader realize that the past and future are real illusions. They exist in the present, which is all there is.

SHORT ANSWER QUESTIONS

Q 1 What, according to the psychiatrist, was Charley's problem?

Ans: Charley told the psychiatrist about his belief in the existence of the third level at the Grand Central Station but was told that it was only a waking- dream wish fulfillment. The psychiatrist also added that Charley was unhappy because of the insecurity, fear, war, worry and that he just wanted to escape just like everyone else.

Q 2. What did the psychiatrist think about Charley's stamp collection ? Why did Charley not agree with him?

Ans: The psychiatrist thought that Charley's stamp collecting was a temporary refuge from reality .Charley did not agree with him because his grandfather for whom things were nice and peaceful and who did not need refuge from reality also collected stamps.

Q 3.How does Charley describe himself?

Ans. Charley describes himself as just an ordinary guy, thirty-one years old. He wore a tan gabardine suit and a straw hat with a fancy band. He was just like other men he passed on the road and he was not trying to escape from anything.

Q 4. Why does Charley feel that Grand Central is growing like a tree?

Ans: In the story, "The third level", Charley describes the Grand central station as a huge tree spreading its roots all over.

Charley was rushing back to home on an evening. He decided to take the subway to reach the Grand Central station. But unfortunately, he became lost as he found himself in the strange third level. He got to see new corridors, stair cases, and tunnels.

Everything seems to be so new to him and he finds the station as a huge tree spreading its roots all over. As he entered the tunnel the reach the station, he found the path leading to a lobby of a hotel which left him totally confused.

Q 5. How did Charley make sure that he had actually travelled in the past?

Ans: Charley went to the news stand and looked at the Newspaper ,he saw that it was 'The World' ,a Newspaper that was no longer published . He later discovered through Public Library files it was printed on June 11, 1894

Q 6. Describe Galesburg, as it existed in the year 1894?

Ans: Galesburg was a wonderful town with big old frame houses, huge lawns, and tremendous trees whose branches met overhead and roofed over the streets. In 1894, summer evenings were twice as long, and people sat on their lawns, the men smoking.

Q 7 What preparations did Charley make to go to Galesburg?

Ans: He drew 300 dollars out of bank and purchased old style currency.

Q 8 In which context did Charley say, “eggs were thirteen cents a dozen in 1894”?

Ans: Charley had got his three hundred dollars out of the bank and got them changed into oldstyle currency so that he could go back to the third level and buy the tickets to Galesburg.

For his three hundred dollars he had got only two hundred dollars old-style currency but he didn't mind that. The only consolation was that in the year 1894, the two hundred dollars would have more value, as things were much cheaper then than they were now.

Q 9 What made Louisa, Charley's wife, believe that the third level was a reality?

Ans: Louisa, like Charley's friends, believed whatever explanations the psychiatrist friend had given. But later, when she received a mail from Sam himself from the old Galesburg, Louisa believed that Charley was true to his claims and even began to search for the third level.

Q 10 What is a first day cover?

Ans: When a new stamp is issued, stamp collectors buy some and use them to mail envelopes to themselves on the very first day of sale; and the postmark proves the date. They're never opened; they just put blank paper in the envelope. The envelope is called a first-day cover.

Q 11 Who had sent the first day cover and what was written on it?

Ans: Sam had sent the first day cover. Sam wrote that he had discovered the Third level and had reached Galesburg .He found Galesburg peaceful and friendly .he advised Charley to keep looking for third level and reach Galesburg.

Q 12 How did Charley happen to reach the Third Level of Grand Central Station, New York?

Ans: One day Charley worked for more time at office. So he was late for home. So he took the subway from the Grand Central to reach the second level of it. From there he was to catch a train. He started walking quickly. He reached the second level. But, all of a sudden, he lost his way there. He entered a corridor that had a left turn. It was also slanting somewhat downwards. It was like a tunnel. He met no one on the way. There was dead silence. Even he could hear the sound of his own footsteps. Then the corridor took a sharp left turn. After coming down a flight of stairs he reached the third level of the Grand Central Station.

LONG ANSWER QUESTIONS

Q1. Describe the Grand Central Station at the third level ?

Ans: Grand Central Station at the third level looked very different.

There were Fewer ticket windows and train gates . Information booth was in the center, it was made of wood and was very old looking man in the booth wore green eye shade and long sleeve protectors. The lights were dim and flickering as they were open flame gaslights. There were brass spittoons on the floor.

Men wore Derby hats a black four button suit with tiny lapels and he had a big ,black handlebar moustache. Men had beards, sideburns and fancy moustaches .Women wore dresses with leg of mutton sleeves .He caught a glimpse of a very small Currier &Ives Locomotive with a funnel shaped stack. He also saw a copy of the “The World” ,a Newspaper which hadn’t been published for years.

Q2. What was reaction of the Clerk at the Ticket counter? Why?

Ans: .After Charley discovered that he was on the Third level ,he decided go to Galesburg with his wife Louisa and turned to purchase two tickets from the ticket counter the clerk at the ticket counter glanced at his fancy hatband curiously .However when Charley counted the money and handed over the currency notes to the clerk ,he started staring at Charley openly .He felt that Charley was trying to give him fake currency as the currency used in 1894 were old style bills half as big as the notes that Charley was using ,he even threatened to turn him to the authorities Charley did not relish the prospect of going to jail therefore he turned and got out of the Third level as fast as possible.

Q3 Imagination is a ‘temporary refuge from reality’ Explain.

Ans: Sam Believed it was a waking dream, perhaps wish fulfilment.

He Felt that like many man in the modern world Charley too was unhappy. Modern world is full of trials and tribulations, worries and insecurities. He Felt Charley wanted to escape this world. All People indulge in some sort of hobby to escape the stark harsh realities. According to him, even stamp collecting was a kind of temporary escape. Charley refuted his contention-said people do not wander about due to stress. Besides his grandfather had also collected stamps in the good old peaceful days of eighteen-nineties and did not need to escape as life was quite stress free in those days.

Q4 Elaborate the theme of the story

Ans: Value Points- The story primarily focuses on the atrocities of the modern world – full of insecurity, stress, fear, war & hatred – one feels caged – by modern advancement – leads to tension and worries – leading people to look for means of an escape. In the story Charlie – creates the third level to seek refuge – cases his pressure – provide sweet power to relax.

Q5, How is the ending of "The Third Level" by Jack Finney ironic?

Ans: The story is about the notion of "escape," and specifically a kind of escape from history. Charley, the narrator, is a typical guy—one of dozens of men who look the same in their straw hats and gabardine suits. The escape Charley longs for is not a vacation from the city, however: he longs to escape to the past, to a time before the world wars. The non-existent third level of Grand Central station offers just such an escape: it is a kind of portal to the past.

The ending is ironic because it is the narrator Charley's "psychiatrist friend" Sam who makes it back to Galesburg, Illinois in 1893, not Charley himself. Charley confided in Sam about the third level, and Sam of course told Charley that he was experiencing a kind of "waking dream wish fulfillment." But Sam "got to wishing" that Charley had been right; like everyone, Sam, too, craves an escape from the twentieth century; he was able to find the third level (because, it is suggested, he wanted escape so badly) and buy train tickets to Galesburg. In the end, it is the psychiatrist, who ostensibly is trying to ground Charley in the present, who escapes into a past where even his profession does not yet exist.

Textual Questions

1. What does the third level refer to?

A. Third level refers to an additional floor at the Grand Central Station which originally only had two levels. Charley was hallucinating one night while going home when he reached the third level.

2. Would Charley ever go back to the ticket-counter on the third level to buy tickets to Galesburg for himself and his wife?

A. Charley went looking back for the third level that could take him and his wife to Galesburg because he wanted to go back to his past. He wanted to go back to the world that has not seen two of its deadliest wars that changed everything.

3.. Do you think that the third level was a medium of escape for Charley? Why?

A. Yes, the third level of the Grand Central Station was a medium of escape for Charley. Modern world offers a lot of challenges and in order to take refuge from reality, one might resort to day-dreaming or hallucination. We all understand the miseries of the modern world which is full of worry and pressure, thus, in order to take the burden away from his shoulders and heave a sigh of relief, Charley resorted to escaping reality, although unintentionally.

4. What do you infer from Sam's letter to Charley?

A. The way Charley discovered Sam's letter was rather peculiar. It was one of those first-day covers people used to mail to themselves back in time with a blank page inside. So to begin with, the cover had a letter in it and not a blank page in it. Secondly, the letter dates back to 18 July, 1894 when Sam (the writer of the letter) didn't exist because both Sam and Charley exist in the present times. Thus, it is sound to conclude that it was just a product of Charley's imagination.

5. "The modern world is full of insecurity, fear, war, worry and stress." What are the ways in which we attempt to overcome them?

A. One cannot count on fingers the negative aspects the modern lifestyle has to offer. There is stress, pressure, fear, insecurity and worry. In order to relieve yourself of all these miseries, one can indulge in creative activities from time to time. Making time for yourself and what you love without worrying about a productive outcome is a crucial thing many people tend to ignore in the hustle and bustle of daily lives. Secondly, one can read a good book or even meditate. Long walks in the lap of nature are not to be underestimated because nature has its own healing power. Apart from these, a short weekend getaway, movie night with friends or even alone at home can be done in order to dissociate oneself from the routine.

6. Do you see an intersection of time and space in the story?

A. Yes, there are a lot of instances that tell us about the intersection of time and space in the story. First intersection being the one between the first two levels of the Grand Central Station and its third level which is based somewhere in the 1890s whereas the former exists in the present times. Also when Charley went to buy tickets for Galesburg which existed in 1894 while he and his wife exist in the present times. Not to ignore the old-fashioned architecture of the third level in contradiction to the modern interiors of the first two levels. Lastly, the letter dated 18th July, 1982 that Charley found also throws light upon the intersection of time and space as both the sender (Sam) and the receiver (Charley) exist in the present times.

7. Apparent illogicality sometimes turns out to be a futuristic projection? Discuss.

A. While a lot of the world's greatest inventions were made by people who were criticised for their ideas. Audiences used to mock at them for being illogical. Sighting the example of Thomas Edison who invented the light bulb, no one believed in him at first but all he had was an idea and its realistic projection in mind. The idea here tells us how important it is to sometimes follow one's insight and have hope for it holds the capacity to change the world through its futuristic projections.

8. Philately helps keep the past alive. Discuss other ways in which this is done. What do you think of the human tendency to constantly move between the past, the present and the future?

A. Philately does indeed help in keeping the treasures of past alive. It gives one a chance to revisit and embrace the past of one's existence. Some of the other ways in which it can be done is by keeping a record of all the letters, ancient manuscripts, things that are discontinued but were a significant part of the past, images, videos and written records of experiences. Human beings are a collection of all the experiences they have been through. Their tendency to connect with the past from time to time helps them stay connected to the roots while helping them to face the present and future challenges with more strength. Connecting with the future on the other hand, is just as important to know the outcome of one's current actions and decisions. If one doesn't seem satisfied with the realistic interpretation of future, it can certainly help in altering current actions to direct towards a better future.

About the Author

Pearl S. Buck was born on June 26, 1892, in Hillsboro, West Virginia. In 1930, she published her first novel, East Wind, West Wind. Her next novel, The Good Earth, earned her a Pulitzer Prize in 1932. In 1938, Buck became the first American female Nobel laureate. Concurrent with her writing career, she started the Pearl S. Buck Foundation, a humanitarian organization. She died on March 6, 1973, in Danby, Vermont.

Introduction

The Enemy is set at the time of the Second World War. It is a heart-rending portrayal of the conflict between man's head and heart. An American prisoner of war is washed ashore in a dying state and is found at the doorstep of a very eminent Japanese surgeon and scientist, Dr Sadao Hoki. Sadao is torn between his duty as a doctor and as Japanese. His heart is telling him to save the prisoner while his mind is fighting to turn him over to the police. It is, indeed, a difficult choice to decide whether one should allow oneself to be governed by emotion or by reason.

Summary

Dr Sadao Hoki and his Traditional Father

Dr Sadao, a famous Japanese surgeon, and an accomplished scientist lived in a house on the Japanese coast. The house was set upon rocks above a narrow beach surrounded by pine trees. As a child, Sadao used to climb these trees. He often visited the South Sea Islands with his father. His father believed that the islands were steppingstones of Japan's future to gain perfection. Sadao's father was a profoundly serious and traditional man. He never joked or played with him but took infinite pains for his son. Sadao's education was his chief concern. He even sent Sadao to America to complete his studies. Sadao's father inculcated in him values of patriotism and national loyalty when the latter was quite young and Sadao had always cherished these great virtues.

The Second World War started, but Sadao was not sent with the troops because he was about to make a discovery which would render wounds entirely clean. Also, the General, who was old, was being treated by Sadao, and he might require an operation anytime.

Sadao met Hana in America, waited for his Father's Consent to Marry Her Sadao had met Hana in America, but he had waited until he was sure that she was Japanese before deciding to marry her. His father would never have approved of her otherwise. Sadao recalled that his meeting with Hana was an accident. Sadao lived in Professor Harley's house and had almost not gone to the Professor's house that night, where he met Hana, a new student.

After Sadao and Hana had finished their studies, they came home to Japan. The marriage was solemnized in the traditional Japanese way according to his father's wishes. They were a happy couple.

The Prisoner is Washed Ashore

One night, Sadao and Hana were enjoying the view of the sea from their verandah when they saw something black coming out of the mists. It was a man. He staggered a few steps and then the mists hid him again. When they saw him again, he was crawling. Sadao thought that he was a fisherman washed ashore from his boat. The surf beyond the beach was spiked with rocks. The man might be badly hurt.

They found the man wounded. Hana realized that it was a white man. The fellow was young and unconscious. The man was bleeding profusely. Sadao saw that a bullet wound had reopened. Sadao packed the wound with sea moss. The man moaned with pain, but he did not awaken. Sadao wanted to throw the man back into the sea as he had now realized that he was an American prisoner of war.

Hana also agreed. Sadao knew that giving shelter to the enemy would get them in trouble. He was torn between his moral duty as a doctor which urged him to save the dying man and his national duty which required handing him over to the Army as a patriot. Both Hana and Sadao finally decided to take the man home, as he needed urgent medical attention.

The Servants React Bitterly

They decided that they might tell the servants also. They would tell them that they intended to give him over to the police. The man had been starved for a long time and he was light as a fowl. They carried him to Sadao's father's bedroom. The old man had never allowed a foreign object in his room.

The American was very dirty and needed to be washed. Hana said that Yumi, the governess, might wash her. She went to fetch her. When she returned to the kitchen, she found the other two servants frightened at what Sadao had told them.

The servants tried to convince Sadao that he must hand over the enemy to the police. Yumi refused to wash the American and Hana had to wash him herself.

Sadao Saves the Enemy's Life

Sadao was ready to operate. Sadao was completely absorbed in his work. He told Hana that she would need to give anesthetic to the man.

Hana probably had never seen an operation and started vomiting. Sadao was irritable and impatient with his enemy, as he was not able to help Hana in her distress. The man groaned with pain.

Interestingly enough, Hana was able to assist her husband in the operation. Hana noticed deep red scars on the neck of their enemy. She wondered if the war torture stories, she had heard were actually true. She recalled that General Takima was a ruthless man who did not even spare his wife. Sadao murmured while operating, as was his habit. He called the enemy his 'friend'. Sadao finally succeeded in taking the bullet out. He was sure that the man would live in spite of his sufferings.

The Patient gets Better but the Servants Decide to Leave

Hana took good care of the man. She served him, as the servants refused to enter the room. The man was surprised to see Hana talk in English. Hana told him that she had lived in America for a long time. The enemy revealed his name to Hana. His name was Tom. Sadao was still confused about handing him over to the police.

The servants resented their decision to help the American soldier. Hana told Sadao that the servants could not live in the house if the enemy was still present. The servants thought that the couple liked Americans. Sadao tried to clarify that all Americans were his enemies. They talked about the consequences of harboring an enemy. Hana could hear what they were talking about. On the seventh day, the servants left.

The General's Messenger; Sadao Goes to See the General

On the same day, a messenger in official uniform came to Sadao's house. Hana was so scared that she was unable to speak. She thought that he was there to arrest Sadao. In fact, the messenger had come to inform Sadao that the General needed him. Looking at Hana in utter distress, Sadao decided to get rid of the man.

Sadao told the whole episode to the General. The General knew that Sadao was indispensable to him. He never trusted other Japanese surgeons. The General promised Sadao that nothing would happen to him.

The General then planned to assassinate the enemy. He told Sadao that his private assassins were very competent and would also remove the dead body. Sadao thought that this plan would be the best for his family.

After that meeting, Sadao spent three restless nights waiting for the assassins. But they did not come. Finally, the torture became too much to bear for him. He planned to get rid of the enemy himself.

Sadao Helps the Enemy

Sadao told the escape plan to Tom. He also warned him that he needed to escape as the news of his presence was not hidden anymore. He arranged a boat, food, drinking water and clothing for the young man and also gave him his own flashlight. He told Tom that he should flash the light two times if he needed something, once if everything was fine. He must do this only when the sun dropped over the horizon. He further added that Tom could find many fish to eat but he should eat them raw lest the fire be seen. Even Hana did not know about this plan. Sadao had told Tom to wait for a Korean ship.

Sadao went to the General. Sadao had operated on him and he had survived. The General informed Sadao that he forgot about the prisoner, as he was unwell. He told Sadao not to leak this information to anybody.

Back at home, Sadao remembered his days in America and the Americans he met there. He wondered why he could not kill Tom, his enemy.

Gist of the story

- One day Sadao and his wife, Hana, encountered a strange man on the seashore. He was badly injured. At first, they thought he was a fisherman, but when they went closer, they realized that he was a soldier of the US Navy, a prisoner of war, their enemy.
- Sadao and Hana decide to take him home because he needs help. They think of ways to avoid leaking his identity.

- The servant when finding out the truth refuses to help him and Hana. Hana, despite not being a doctor, helps Sadao in treating him.
- Throughout the whole story, Sadao has no idea why he is helping the man. Hana also agreed because her husband, Sadao, wanted to help the man.
- As they treat him, they found scars on his body of torture. It evoked their sympathies with him.
- When Sadao was treating him, he forgot that he is the enemy. He used to address him as a patient. He used to check him from time to time.
- Hana also took good care of the man by providing him with food. However, the man thinks that they would hand him over to the government.
- At last, the servants also left Sadao and Hana because of the man. Hana was confused about why she and Sadao are not like other Japanese people.
- One day, the General called Sadao as he got sick. Sadao told him about the injured man at his place and the General said that he will send his men to take the man and nobody would get to know about the incident.
- However, the General forgot his words and never sent any men. Sadao waited for days in terror but at last, he decided to send the man away on a boat.
- When Sadao met General again, he told him everything about the man's escape. He realized that he was so busy with himself that he forgot that the nation's enemy was in Sadao's place. However, he covered his mistake by telling him that he will reward Sadao.
- In the end, Sadao was still confused about why he helped him and could not kill the man.

Textual question-answer

Question 1: Who was Dr Sadao? Where was his house?

Answer: Dr. Sadao was a famous surgeon and scientist of Japan. He was a sympathetic man who remained loyal to his profession even in adverse situations. He lived in his ancestral square stone house in Japan, which was built upon rocks, above a narrow beach, on the Japanese coast.

Question 2: It is the time of the World War. An American prisoner of war is washed ashore in a dying state and is found at the doorstep of a Japanese doctor. Should he save him as a doctor or hand him over to the army as a patriot?

Answer: Humanity and love are the only saving grace in this materialistic world governed by hatred and chaos. Our lives should be centered on harbouring these feelings in ourselves and in those around us.

Keeping this in mind, if a doctor gets an opportunity to save a distressed and wounded person, he should definitely help him. People consider doctors next to God. Even their profession asks them to help all patients, regardless of caste, race, religion, or nationality. Thus, keeping humanity superior to anything else in life, the war prisoner should definitely be saved.

(The above answer is only a sample provided for students' reference. It is strongly recommended that students prepare the answer on their own.)

Question 3: Will Dr Sadao be arrested on the charge of harbouring an enemy?

Answer: Dr Sadao, on humanitarian grounds as well as considering it his professional duty, tended a wounded war prisoner which was officially a serious crime. However, he did not get punished for this offence as it was never revealed to anyone, except his wife, loyal but timid servants, and a General who was too self-obsessed with his own treatment that he would never let the doctor leave him.

Question 4: Will Hana help the wounded man and wash him herself?

Answer: The wounded American was in a very bad state and needed to be washed before being operated on. Hana did not want Dr Sadao to clean the dirty and unconscious prisoner, and so asked their servant, Yumi, to do so. However, Yumi defied her master's order and opted out of it. As a result, Hana had no other option but to wash him herself. Although this act was impulsive and dipped in a sense of superiority over her servant, Yumi, she did it with sincerity.

Question 5: What will Dr Sadao and his wife do with the man?

Answer: Dr Sadao and Hana found an unconscious wounded war prisoner who posed a huge threat to their own safety. However, Dr Sadao decided to go with his gut feeling and operate on him. He saved his life even though it was for the time being. Though half-heartedly, both took good care of the patient's health and other needs. Hana even washed and fed him with her own hands. Although they knew that they would have to hand him over to the army sooner or later, they did their best to help the injured man.

Question 6: Will Dr Sadao be arrested on the charge of harbouring an enemy?

Answer: Dr Sadao, on humanitarian grounds as well as professional grounds, tended a wounded war prisoner which was officially a serious crime. However, he did not get punished for this offence as it was never revealed to anyone, except his wife, loyal but timid servants, and a General who was too self-obsessed with his own treatment that he would never let the doctor leave him.

Question 7: What will Dr Sadao do to get rid of the man?

Answer: With the injured American's health gradually improving, Dr Sadao and Hana were in a fix as to what should be done with him. Their loyal servants had left them and keeping him in their house could pose a threat to their lives. As Hana's impatience and distress grew, Dr Sadao revealed the matter to the General who decided to send assassins to kill the young American in his sleep. Keen on getting rid of the escaped war prisoner, Dr Sadao agreed. However, the matter could not be resolved because the assassins never came.

Dr Sadao then planned another way to get rid of him which was overpowered with sympathy and a distant gratitude towards the people he had been linked to in America. He decided to save his patient one more time. He secretly sent him to an isolated island with food, bottled water, clothes, blanket, and his own flashlight on a boat from where he boarded a Korean ship to freedom and safety.

Question 8: There are moments in life when we have to make hard choices between our roles as private individuals and as citizens with a sense of national loyalty. Discuss with reference to the story you have just read.

Answer: Life has many facets. We live it by maintaining a delicate balance between the various facets it offers to us as part of our existence as an individual in a society. Living for our own self, family, profession, and country are just a few of them. However, at times, it becomes difficult to maintain this balance, and gets overpowered by confusion and dilemmas.

The story about Dr Sadao, Hana and the war prisoner exemplifies this. On finding a wounded war prisoner washed ashore, Dr Sadao and Hana are unable to decide what to do. They are confused whether they should save and tend the injured or leave him to die or inform the army.

Eventually, Dr Sadao strikes a balance by deciding to save him before handing him over to the army. He and his wife sympathetically tend him but the pressure, of secretly hiding a war prisoner in their home and going against the rule of the law, subdue their sympathetic self. In a bid to get rid of this burden, Dr Sadao reveals it to the General who promises to get the prisoner killed through assassins. But Dr Sadao's humane side again pops up asking him to ply with the voice of his soul, and he goes out of his way to help the enemy soldier flee to safety.

Question 9: Dr Sadao was compelled by duty as a doctor to help the enemy soldier. What made Hana, his wife, sympathetic to him in the face of open defiance from the domestic staff?

Answer: Dr Sadao and Hana knew that their decision to save the enemy soldier would be questioned by everyone. However, they firmly followed their sense of duty. For Dr Sadao, this sense of duty came from the profession he was in; but for Hana, the duty was purely humanitarian. From bearing the unrest in her domestic staff to being forced to do all the chores of household herself, she does all with grace and dignity. Hana's loving, considerate and sympathetic nature shines out. She washed and fed the soldier although it was not her job. Her care helped recuperate the soldier fast. It is also apparent from the story that she respected her husband, and as a sense of duty towards him, did the needful. This explains why she, even after feeling sick, comes back to the room and readily does whatever is told by her husband during the operation.

Question 10: How would you explain the reluctance of the soldier to leave the shelter of the doctor's home even when he knew he could not stay there without risk to the doctor and himself?

Answer: When the American war prisoner came to consciousness and realized that he was saved by a Japanese family, he feared that he will be soon handed over to the army. However, as he noticed the amount of concern and care given to him by the family, he understood that he was in safe hands. He knew that although he was a threat to the doctor's family, his own life might be saved there. Burdened with gratitude towards the family, he ultimately decides to comply with what the doctor planned for him – the escape.

Question 11: What explains the attitude of the General in the matter of the enemy soldier? Was it human consideration, lack of national loyalty, dereliction of duty or simply self-absorption?

Answer: The General was totally governed by self-absorption. He was a patient of Dr Sadao and did not trust anyone except him when it came to his health. He could not take the risk of living unprotected if the doctor were executed for treachery. He had personal assassins whom he promised to use for killing the injured soldier. But ironically, he forgot his promise to help the doctor. Human consideration was not his cup of tea.

Question 12: While hatred against a member of the enemy race is justifiable, especially during war time, what makes a human being rise above narrow prejudices?

Answer: News of war is fast becoming a way of life. The moment one picks up a newspaper, one is bombarded with news of wars between different countries, directly or indirectly. It is obvious that the countries at war are enemies and hatred is a part of this enmity. However, the success of humanity comes when we rise above this enmity and show our love towards the civilization as a whole. Dr Sadao did the same. He did whatever he could to save the life of a man whom he knew was a war prisoner. The instant he saw the injured man, he was filled with concern. Ignoring the fact that he was the enemy of his country and must have killed so many Japanese and may kill even more, if alive, he saved him.

Question 13: Do you think the doctor's final solution to the problem was the best possible one in the circumstances?

Answer: The doctor tried his best to save the injured soldier as a part of his duty. But the ultimate question was what to do next. It cannot be said that he betrayed his country as he told the truth to the General. However, when he noticed that the soldier was to be killed not for the benefit of the country but only to save the doctor's life, he decided to help him flee. In such a situation, the doctor's final solution to the problem was the best possible one.

Question 14: Does the story remind you of "Birth" by A. J. Cronin that you read in Snapshots last year? What are the similarities?

Answer: The story definitely reminds one of “Birth” by A. J. Cronin. There is a striking similarity between both the stories. Both revolve around doctors who try their level best to save the lives of nearly dead human beings. In the story “Birth” Dr Andrew saves the life of an almost still born baby boy with lot of effort, while “The Enemy” deals with the story of Dr Sadao who saves an American soldier from the enemy troops during the times of war. Both the stories deal with humanity, love, affection, selflessness, and a strong sense of duty.

Question 15: Is there any film you have seen or novel you have read with a similar theme?

Answer: The story “The Enemy” is built on the pillars of selflessness, sense of duty, kindness, and generosity. There have been many films and novels based on this theme. One such example is the film “My Name is Khan”, where the protagonist, with a sense of duty and generosity, goes to the flooded Georgia to save the lives of his friends, Mama Jenny, Joel, and other natives. He selflessly works to save the town without thinking twice about the possible dangers to his own life.

Though Dr. Sadao did not want to go there, he went and there he met Hana who was a first-year student.

Question 13. Who did Dr. Sadao think the survivor from the sea was when he first saw him?

Answer: When Dr. Sadao saw the man on the seashore, he thought him to be a fisherman from a nearby village who had been washed ashore from his boat. There were fishing villages, a mile or two away on either side.

Question 14. Why did Dr. Sadao seek Hana's help to treat the US soldier?

Answer: The US Soldier was badly wounded. He had a deep wound which was to be operated upon immediately. Dr. Sadao needed some assistance at the time of operation. The most important task was to give anaesthesia to the patient at the time of operation so as to stop his movement. Dr. Sadao could not call anyone from outside as he had to keep the presence of US soldier in his house a secret. So, he asked Hana to help him during the operation and give anaesthesia to the patient.

Question 15. On the seventh day, after the American soldier was found by Dr. Sadao, two things happened. Why did Hana feel scared of the second?

Answer: The second thing that happened on the seventh day was that a messenger came in official uniform to call on Dr. Sadao. When Hana saw the official, she got scared. She thought that the servants might have complained to the police about the white man and so the official had come to arrest Dr. Sadao.

Question 16. Give two reasons why Dr. Sadao was not sent abroad with the Japanese soldiers.

Answer: The General was very ill, and he was being treated by Dr. Sadao. He needed an operation and for that he trusted only Dr. Sadao. Moreover, Dr. Sadao was doing a research to render 'the wounds entirely clean'; that is why he was not sent abroad with the Japanese soldiers.

Question 17. Give a character sketch of Dr. Sadao's father.

Answer: Dr. Sadao's father was a traditional man. He was a serious and stern man and a very concerned father. He never played with Dr. Sadao but had been very keen in providing the best to him. He was mainly concerned about Dr. Sadao's education, that is why he sent Dr. Sadao to America to study. But at the same time, he wanted him to come back and serve his people. He had great respect for his culture and traditions.

Question 18. How did the General offer to help Dr. Sadao in getting rid of the American?

Answer: The General offered to send his private assassins to help Dr. Sadao in getting rid of the American. These assassins would kill the white man noiselessly and also dispose of his body.

Question 19. What was the dilemma faced by Dr. Sadao and Hana after encountering the injured American soldier?

Answer: When Hana and Dr. Sadao saw the American soldier, they were in a dilemma. They were very loyal to their country and did not want to save the enemy. They wanted to hand him over to the police. But the man was wounded and in a pitiable state. Thus, the doctor inside Dr. Sadao urged him to save his life. Humanity rose above patriotism and they thought of first treating him and then handing him over to the police.

Question 20. Why does the General not want to be treated by doctors trained in Germany?

Answer: The General trusted Dr. Sadao deeply. He did not want to be operated upon by anyone other than Dr. Sadao. The General believed that Germans were ruthless and quite cruel. So, he was afraid of being operated upon by them. He believed that the Americans valued life and had sentiments attached to it. So, he wanted to be treated by Dr. Sadao who was trained at America.

Long Questions and Answers

Question 1. Why did Dr. Sadao Hoki go to America? Narrate his experience there.

Ans. Dr. Sadao Hoki was a skilled surgeon and scientist who was working on his discovery to 'render the wounds clean'. Dr. Sadao was brought up by his father who was a staunch Japanese. His chief concern was Dr. Sadao's education. He was sent to America at the age of twenty-two to learn all that could be learnt of surgery and medicine. He returned at the age of thirty and by that time had become famous not only as a surgeon but also as a scientist. Dr. Sadao had a tough time adjusting in America as he remembered that Americans were full of prejudice. It had been bitter for him to live there. He had an ignorant and dirty old woman as his landlady. The best thing in America had been to meet Hana, his wife, at one of his professor's house who was a dull man and his wife, a silly talkative woman. Her experience in America had not been so good as he had to adjust a lot there, being a Japanese.

Question 2. What impression do you form about Dr. Sadao as a man and a surgeon on your reading the chapter 'The Enemy'?

Answer: Dr. Sadao was a skilled surgeon and a famous scientist. His excellence in his professional field was evident from the fact that the General had full faith in him as regards his health. Dr. Sadao was devoted to his work and to the cause of the needy. When he saw the American soldier in a wounded condition, he was torn between the natural human instinct to save his life and treat him or as a patriot hand him over to the police.

Dr. Sadao saved the life of the man as per his professional ethics as he could not leave a person to die. It was his duty to save the life of a person as a doctor. At this point of time, when Dr. Sadao saw this dying man, his spirit of humanity surpassed everything else and so he saved one life irrespective of any colour, caste, or creed.

Question 3. Do you think Dr. Sadao's final decision was the best possible one in the circumstances? Why/Why not? Explain with reference to the story, 'The Enemy'.

Answer: Dr. Sadao saved the life of an American war prisoner as his professional and humanitarian duty. But he was very loyal to his country too. He told the General about the white man and the General promised to send his private assassins to kill him. But due to his self-absorption in his illness, the General forgot to send them. Thus, finally, Dr. Sadao decided to help the American soldier escape from there. He gave him a boat, flashlight, food, and water and asked him to go to a nearby unguarded island. He could look for a Korean boat and escape.

This could be the best solution in the prevailing circumstances. Dr. Sadao was in danger of being caught for harbouring a POW. In that case, he would be questioned for the reason to give this enemy a shelter in his house. So, in order to save his reputation and the life of the white man, there could be no better way than what Dr. Sadao had decided.

Question 4. Explain the reaction of the servants in Dr. Sadao's house when he decided to give shelter to an enemy in the house.

Answer: The servants did not like the idea of giving shelter to an enemy in the house. Yumi, the governess of the children, stubbornly refused to wash the white man and threatened to leave the job if she was forced. When Dr. Sadao told his gardener about the wounded white man, he got upset and even frightened. He opposed Dr. Sadao for treating his enemy. In fact, all the servants in the house were critical of Dr. Sadao's sheltering the enemy. They refused to help him. They were superstitious and fearful about the wrath of nature. They tried their level best to send the white man away. Finally, when Dr. Sadao did not listen to them and decided to give shelter to the white man in his house, they left the house.

Question 5. What conflicting ideas arise in Dr. Sadao's mind after he has brought the wounded American soldier home? How is the conflict resolved?

Answer: When Dr. Sadao brought the wounded American soldier home, he was wondering whether what he was doing was right. The conflict was between his duty as a doctor and as a loyal citizen. As a doctor, it was his professional duty to help and save a dying man. But as a patriot and a loyal citizen of his country, he was supposed to hand over this man to the police as he was a POW, an enemy. The moment Dr. Sadao felt his wound and found that the man needed to be operated upon immediately, he forgot about everything else and his humanitarian virtues as a doctor made him operate upon the man and save his life.

Question 6. How did Dr. Sadao help the American POW to escape? What humanitarian values do you find in his act?

Answer: Dr. Sadao gave the American prisoner of war a boat, a flashlight, food, and water. He told him to go to a nearby unguarded island. He should stay there till a Korean boat passed by and then escape taking refuge in it. He dressed him in Japanese clothes and wrapped a black cloth on his head. He asked him to signal him two flashes at the same instant the sun drops over the horizon. He asked him to signal him once if he was all right till the time he escaped in Korean boat. He helped the American soldier to escape and save his life. This act of Dr. Sadao was an act of humanism and compassion. As a doctor he had saved the life of a man without of any prejudice. Dr. Sadao had displayed himself as a man, full of compassion and humanity by this act.

Question 7. Dr. Sadao was a patriotic Japanese as well as a dedicated surgeon. How could he honour both the values?

Answer: Dr. Sadao was a patriotic Japanese as well as a dedicated surgeon. He honoured both the values excellently., it, was his duty, as a surgeon was to save the life of a man irrespective of caste, colour, or creed. For a doctor, his patient is beyond any prejudice. When Dr. Sadao saw the white man, he realised that the man would die if he was not immediately operated upon. So, he took the man to his house and treated him and saved his life. That was his duty as a dedicated surgeon.

Dr. Sadao was a loyal citizen of Japan and a true patriot. So, when he went to the General, he told him everything and sought his help. Dr. Sadao had no pity for the white man and considered him his enemy. The General assured to send his assassins but forgot. So, at the end, Dr. Sadao had to help the prisoner of war to escape from there.

Question 8. Good human values are far above any other value system. How did Dr. Sadao succeed as a doctor as well as a patriot?

Answer: Dr Sadao was an intelligent and a committed doctor, very adept in surgical skills and was an efficient scientist too. The story 'The Enemy' portrays Dr Sadao as true to his profession as it was his primary duty to help a wounded person without caring for his identity. When torn between loyalty towards his country and his duty as a doctor to save life, he chose humanity over patriotism. At the same time, he was not shown as lacking national loyalty. After saving the American soldier, he wrote a report about the whole matter but did not send it to the police chief, instead he disclosed everything boldly to the General. These are the instances in the story that project Dr Sadao's humanitarian considerations, his surgical expertise and patriotism. He showed that good human values are far above any other value system.

Question 9. Dr. Sadao used his skills as a doctor not only to keep the prisoner alive but also to safeguard himself. Discuss.

Answer: Dr. Sadao was an expert surgeon. He saved the life of the enemy by operating upon him. But he was in danger of being caught as a traitor for sheltering an enemy. Very intelligently, he used his skills as a doctor to protect himself. He knew very well that the General relied on him for his health and would never let him suffer any harm. So, he told the General everything and got an assurance from him to get rid of the white man. But when the General forgot to do so, Dr. Sadao helped the white man to escape. Knowing that General would never take any action against him he told him that the man had escaped. It was only due to his professional skills as a doctor that he could save himself.

Question 10. At what point did Dr. Sadao decide that it was time to get the enemy out of his house?

Answer: The General had assured Dr. Sadao of sending his assassins to kill the white man. Dr. Sadao waited for three nights for those assassins but they did not come. Every night was full of stress and anxiety for him. Hana was overburdened with the household work as all the servants had left. They were in constant danger of being caught for giving shelter to an American.

At this point of time, Dr. Sadao decided that it was time to get the enemy out of his house. He decided to arrange for an escape of the white man in order to save himself. So, he arranged a boat, extra clothing, food, and water. He gave a flashlight to the American and asked him to go to a nearby unguarded island and from there wait for a Korean fishing boat and escape.

Question 11. Write an article on the topic 'Humanity is the essence of our existence'.

Answer: We are human beings—the most superior species on the earth. Emotions such as empathy, humanity, compassion, love, and devotion make us superior. Every human heart breathes these emotions. Humanity is the most important trait in our personality. Humanity is above territories, caste, creed, and colour. Though we are divided into various countries, continents, states, etc. we must remember that these territories are constituted on the basis of ethnicity, formed by the people of some race and creed. All these are governed by the law, that we have made. But for nature, there is no such discrimination. For the sea, the sun, the rain, the air we all are the same. We all must remember the fact that it is the humanity the oneness with each other, which is the essence of our existence.

Question 12. Which, according to you, is higher — humanity or patriotism? Write a paragraph on the topic: Humanity vs Patriotism.

Answer:

Humanity vs Patriotism

Humanity is above any boundary or prejudice, whereas patriotism is loyalty to one particular country or place where we live. Both are essential for human beings. We should be loyal and devoted to our country and full of patriotic fervour. Humanity is boundless. It is above any caste, creed, or race. It includes love for others. Humanity makes one compassionate, humble, and loving. Humanity is a virtue which unites the entire human race as one, whereas patriotism is comparatively narrow. It is a set of strengths focused on tending others. Thus, it is humanity, which acquires the highest place among all the virtues.

Chapter 5 Should Wizard Hit Mommy?

By- John Updike

About the Author

John Hoyer Updike (March 18, 1932 – January 27, 2009), an American novelist, poet, short-story writer, art critic, and literary critic was one of only three writers to have won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction more than once. John Updike published more than twenty novels, more than a dozen short-story collections, as well as poetry, art and literary criticism and children's books during his career.

Introduction

The story revolves around Jack, a father to two kids- Joanne (Jo) and Bobby. His wife Clare is carrying their third child. Jack had a habit of telling his daughter, Jo a story every evening and on Saturday afternoon naps. This time when he was telling her a story, she interrupts him and asks him questions whenever she feels that things that are being told are not right. So Jack now finds himself in a fix and doesn't know how to resolve Jo's questions. Parents feel that

1. children should do or think exactly what they are told.
2. They should believe whatever they are told by their parents.

But is this the right attitude? This moral question is raised by the story and left for the reader to decide what should be done.

Theme

The story raises a moral issue if the parents should always decide what the children should do or let the children do what they like to do. Children dream and live in their own magical world. They are devoid of despise, ugliness, and petty differences. They are pure at heart. This story raises a moral question at this point, "Should Wizard hit Mommy?" Jo feels that he must. Jack says that it would be wrong because a mommy is always right. She should be loved and respected.

Characters

1. Joanne: a four year old girl, lovingly called as 'Jo'.
2. Jack: Father of Joanne
3. Clare: Wife of Jack, mother of Joanne.
4. Skunk: a baby creature with a bad smell.
5. Mother Skunk: Mother of baby Skunk.
6. Owl: a wise creature that solves the problems.
7. Wizard: A magician.

Summary

Jack was the father of two little kids – Jo and Bobby. His wife Clare was carrying their third child. Jack would tell a story to his daughter Jo out of his head in the evenings and for Saturday naps. This custom of story-telling began when Jo was two-year-old and it was continuing for the last two years. Each new story only differed a bit from the basic tale. There always was a small creature, usually named Roger, for example, Roger Fish, Roger Squirrel, Roger Chipmunk etc. He always had some problem and he would go to the wise old owl. The owl would tell him to go to the Wizard, who would perform a magic spell that solved the problem. The Wizard in turn would demand in payment a number of pennies greater than the number Roger creature had. But at the same time he would direct the animal to a place where the extra pennies could be found. Then Roger would become so happy that he played many games with other creatures. Roger then would go home to his mother just in time to hear the train whistle that brought his daddy home from Boston. Jack then would describe their supper, and the story was over.

Jack found this story-telling session especially tiring on Saturday, because Jo never fell asleep in naps any more. One Saturday Jack asked Jo about whom the story should be today. Roger Skunk, she said firmly. A new animal; they must talk about Skunk at nursery school. Jack started the story of the tiny creature Skunk, who lived in the dark deep woods. His name was Roger Skunk and he smelled very bad. He smelled so bad that other animals of the jungle would not play with him. They would run away and Roger Skunk would stand there all alone.

Roger Skunk went to the wise old owl and told his problem. The owl asked the Skunk why he did not see the Wizard. Then he went to the Wizard and told that he smelled very bad and all the little animals used to run away from him. The wise owl had told wizard that he could help in that manner. The Wizard took his magic wand and asked Roger Skunk what he wanted to smell like. Roger Skunk told him that he would like to smell like roses. The Wizard chanted and Roger Skunk started smelling like roses. The Wizard asked Roger Skunk to pay seven pennies. Roger Skunk said that he had four pennies only and he began to cry. The Wizard directed Roger to go to the nearby magic well and he would find three pennies there. Roger Skunk took out three pennies from the well and gave them to the Wizard. Now all the other animals gathered around him because he smelled so good. They played various games and laughed. It began to get dark so they all ran home to their mummies. Jo thought that the story was all over.

When Roger Skunk went home his mummy said that the smell was awful. She asked who made him smell like that. Roger Skunk said that the Wizard did so. She said that they were going right back to that Wizard. He said that all the other animals would run away with his bad smell. But his mummy said she did not care. He should smell the way a little Skunk should have smelled. So she took Roger with her and went to the Wizard. When the wizard opened door, she hit him with her umbrella and explained how the wizard's magic infuriated her. The wizard spelled another magic and Roger smelled as foul as he did earlier. But she was displeased with this new ending and wanted her father to make the wizard hit Roger's mommy. But Jack was not ready to make any change as he thought Joe should accept him without questioning. Jo protested but Jack said that it was daddy's story. He said then Roger Skunk and her mummy went home. They had supper and when Roger Skunk was in bed, Mommy Skunk came up and hugged him and said she loved him very much. He told her that the story ends there.

Jo asked her daddy if the other animals ran away from Roger Skunk. Jack said no, they finally got used to the way Roger Skunk was and did not mind it at all. Jo commented that she was a stupid mummy. He asked her to have a long nap as her brother Bobby was also sleeping. Jo told him that she wanted him to tell her the story the next day that Wizard took that magic wand and hit that mummy, right over the head. Jack said that it was not the story. The point is that the little Skunk loved his mummy more than he loved all the other little animals. Moreover, she knew what was right. But Jo insisted that tomorrow he should say that the Wizard hit that mummy. Jack said that he would see and asked her to sleep.

He closed the door and went downstairs. Clare was striking the chair rail with a dipped brush. Above him footsteps vibrated. These were Jo's footsteps. He threatened to beat her and then the footsteps slowed down. Clare observed that it was a long story. He simply said "the poor kid". He watched his wife working hard on the wood-work. She was doing painting work. Thus the writer displays adult authority on one hand and the child's inquisitiveness on the other.

Gist of the Lesson

- The chapter captures a very sensitive reaction of a small girl to an important aspect of the story that her father narrates to her.
- The story reveals the worldview of a little child to a difficult moral question that shows her mental or psychological richness.
- Jo is a little girl of four years. She is engaged in a story session with her father.
- Jack, the father used to tell her a story every evening and especially for Saturday naps Jo feels herself involved with the characters and the happenings.
- The story always had an animal with a problem. The old owl advises him to visit the wizard who would solve the problem.

- Skunk's problem- he smelt bad, visited the wizard who changed it to the smell of roses.
- Skunk's mother was unhappy with it and took him back to the wizard. She hit the wizard and asked him to restore the original smell. She wanted her son to keep his identity of a skunk and wanted his friends to accept him for himself. So the wizard changes him back to smell like a skunk.
- After hearing the story of Roger Skunk Jo was not happy with the ending.
- She wants her father to change the ending. She wants the wizard to hit the mother back and let Roger be which her father was not ready to do to establish his authority. This raises a difficult moral question whether parents possess the right to impose their will on their children.
- Her father finds it difficult to answer her question.

Symbols And Allegory

Jack's Old Shirt

The old shirt of Jack's which Clare wears during her maternity time she paints while he is upstairs telling bedtime stories is symbolic of the shifting gender roles which are likely to make a man like Jack raised within the traditional nuclear family uncomfortable. It is another act of rebellion against that traditional, conservative worldview which Jack has grown dependent upon and serves to become part of the prison in which he is suddenly finding himself caged within.

The Golden Book

Jo seems unusually distracted during this particular story and that sense of distraction has the effect of angering Jack even as he wants to get through the story fast so he can help his wife with the painting. This distraction is symbolized by the Golden Book which slips from the bed at one point. Coincident with this single appearance of the Golden Book is Jack's assertion that "Daddy's telling the story." All these elements invest the Golden Book as a symbol of the four year old growing up with the implicit message that this beloved ritual is about to start drawing to an end. Jo is only about a year or two away from reading stories herself at which point Jack will become obsolete at storytime.

Furniture Being Moved

The persistent sound of furniture scraping across the floor from downstairs as the pregnant Clare is moving it for the purpose of repainting the room becomes another symbol of how Jack's traditional view of masculinity is being threatened by generational changes. His response is always that he should be down there helping, but he never stops brings the story to abrupt end to pursue his role as husband.

The Skunk's Debut

Jack has been engaging in his storytelling ritual for nearly two years now and this is the first time that Jo has ever requested that Roger be a skunk. The symbolic meaning here is related to the choice of animal itself, but rather Jack's assumptions behind the choice. He attributes the origin of this brand new element into what is otherwise a rather rigidly constructed template of his own making to the influence of something that is also apparently new: his daughter attending nursery school. The skunk thus becomes another symbol of the maturation of his daughter and her rebellion against his control which we have learned is of vital important to him since he prefers it when the girls in his life are "hanging on his words" and not taking anything for granted.

Question and Answer

1. What was Roger Skunk's problem?

Because of Roger Skunk's foul smell none of the other little creatures played with him. He used to face a lot of humiliations from other tiny animals. They used to call him "Roger Stinky Skunk" and they ran away from him. Roger was left alone every time.

2. How did the wizard manage to help the Skunk?

The wizard took out his magic wand and asked Roger Skunk what he wanted to smell like. When Roger said that he wanted to smell like roses, the wizard chanted some magic words and fulfilled Roger Skunk's wish. He was happy that all the other little animals played with him, now that he did not smell bad.

3. What had upset Jo about the Skunk's story?

While Roger Skunk was very happy about his own transformation, his mother felt that her baby should smell like a little Skunk and not like roses. So, she took Roger Skunk back to the wizard and hit the wizard over his head with an umbrella. She told him to make Roger Skunk smell bad again.

Jo was worried that now that Roger Skunk smells bad again, no animal would play with him. She wanted the wizard to hit mommy back and refuse to change Roger Skunk.

4. How did Roger Skunk find the extra pennies?

The wizard asked Roger Skunk to go to the end of the lane and turn around three times and look down the magic well and there he would find three pennies. Roger followed the instructions, collected the money and handed it over to the wizard as the price for fulfilling his wish.

5. Why was Roger Skunk's mommy not happy with the change?

Roger Skunk was eager to change his foul smell into a pleasant one. So, he went to the wizard and asked him to make him smell like roses. This change made him acceptable to his friends but his mommy felt that he smelt awful. According to her, a skunk should smell like a skunk and not like roses. Also, she loved him for what he was and did not want him to change even a bit.

6. Why does Jack insist that the end of the story was justified?

Jo felt bad for the skunk for not having any friends and wanted him to smell like roses as only then other animals would play with him. She did not want the skunk to be humiliated and rejected for his foul smell. But Jack wanted to tell Jo "something true, something she must know". He was adding autobiographical details to the story and wished to teach Jo to accept herself as she is. He had been taught by his mother to be comfortable in his own skin and that is exactly what he wished to pass on to his daughter. He refused to change the end of the story as he insisted that the skunk's mommy loved him more than all the other animals and accepted him for what he was.

7. What similarity did Jack find with the skunk?

Roger Skunk was humiliated by all other animals because he smelled really bad. None of the little creatures would play with him and he was boycotted by his peers. Roger Skunk used to cry as he felt lonely and embarrassed. Jack had faced similar kind of situations in his childhood. He also defended Roger's Skunk's mother as if he was defending his own mother.

8. What story did Jo want to hear the next day?

Jo wanted to hear the same story with a different end where the wizard hit the mommy back with his magic wand. She wanted a happy ending in which Roger Skunk would get to play with his friends.

Long answer type questions

1. Should Wizard hit Mommy?

Whenever a story features a title that is a question presenting two opposing choices, chances are that the answer is not going to be a simple one. The most famous example of this, probably, is a story titled “The Lady or the Tiger?” in which the reader is left to ponder the question as it relates to which door a character should choose to open. Behind one is a woman whom will become a young man’s bride, behind the other is a tiger. The author informs the reader which of the two doors the young man opens, but leaves unanswered the titular question: we don’t learn whether he was greeted by the lady or the tiger.

The story sounds simple; so simple that reading a summary of it as presented above makes it sound more like a gimmick than an actual plot. And so it would be if the summary above were adequate. In reality, the real question that the story presents is not whether the door opened to reveal a tiger or a woman because the decision of which door the young man should open was not made by him. You will have to read that story yourself to get the details because the point being made here is that answering the question “Should wizard hit mommy?” is equally complex and goes much deeper than asking merely should the wizard strike Mommy Skunk with his magic wand so that she will accept her son smelling like roses instead of smelling like a skunk. Way too much is going on in the story to present it here, but suffice to say that one should take into consideration everything going on before trying to answer the question posed by the title. Even better: don’t try to answer it. If the author really want the reader to know the answer to the question, he would made the answer the title, such as “Why Wizard Should Hit Mommy!” The very fact that the title is a question is a hint from the author to the reader that the point is not to arrive at an answer. The point is to arrive at a logical explanation for both possible answers.

2. What signs indicate that Jack’s irritation with his daughter is manifested by a fear that his bedtime story ritual may soon be coming to an end?

The narrator indicates that Jack is feeling a little burned out of coming up with stories after two years, that the intended effect of inducing slumber in Jo is fading and that he is especially fatigued on some days. And yet, it is Jack and not Joanne who is responsible for extending the story to the point that the first thing his wife says when he reappears is “That was a long story.” Jack somewhat scornfully assumes that the idea of making Roger a skunk for the first time ever is an idea she picked up since she started nursery school with the implicit message being that he is unhappy with this outside intrusion into the ritual he created. Jack’s response to the Golden Book slipping from his daughter’s bed is instantly to remind her “Daddy’s telling the story.” The incident in which Jack sees in his daughter’s reaction a mirror of his wife’s faking interest at cocktail parties seems strangely out of place and almost forced unless it is connected to these other clues. Joanne’s fidgeting, interruptions and rebellion all serve as indicators that she is growing up and growing older. The request for that Roger be a skunk and the fact that she had been looking through a Golden Book all serve as reminders that she is not far away at all from being able to read herself, thus opening up a universe of stories she’s never heard and further cementing that Jack’s stories are fundamentally the same every time.

3. Is Roger Skunk supposed to represent Jack?

Generally speaking, most criticism accepts as a given that Jack is describing his own childhood in his story about Roger Skunk. The reference to Jack’s own childhood humiliation when describing how the woodland creatures respond to Roger’s bad odor is the most obvious link here, but it is safe to assume that Jack’s mother was aggressively controlling just like Mommy Skunk. So the connection makes sense. There is, however, a problem with simplifying Jack’s story into allegory. The title “Should Wizard Hit Mommy?” carries an implicit double meaning that seems to be also asking “Should Jack Hit Clare.” Or, if not Clare, certainly somebody. At the same time, Jack also seems to be identifying with Mommy Skunk and not just to the degree that he is defending the actions of his own mother. Jack’s insistence that Mommy Skunk “knew what was right” can unquestionably be applied to his own perspective on parenting. Needless to say, the investment of absolute wisdom within the owl makes it clear that this recurring character is also a manifestation of Jack’s ego. So, rather than limiting Jack’s representation in his story to Roger (whatever animal form he may take) it is really more appropriate to suggest that he has made all the characters a projection of himself.

3:- What is the moral issue that the story raises?

Although "Should wizard Hit Mommy"? reads like a typical bed time story elders tell little children, it does raise a moral question - Should parents always decide what is best for their children and should children always obey their parents unquestioningly ?. Roger Skunk is a very obedient child but he feels very sad and upset because he smells so awful that nobody wants to befriend him and play with him. One day he gets a chance to get his bad smell replaced with the smell of roses. He feels excited about the change for everyone likes his new smell and readily agrees to play with him. However Roger's mother does not like the change. For her Roger was better off with his original smell. So, she makes the wizard restore Skunk's original smell. Roger meekly accepts his mother's decision and other children get used to Roger's awful smell and don't complain about it anymore. But the narrow world view of the little girl, Jo likes to spell out the slogan of equality for all. She believes in the axiom 'Tit for Tat'. She feels that mother is wrong in getting her son's original smell back and wants her to be spanked by the wizard for her mistake. Her father, who has modeled Skunk's story on his own story, strongly defends the mother's decision. Thus the author through this story raises a moral question on how much authority parents should exercise in teaching their children what is wrong, what is right, what they should do and what not. Since there is no single correct answer to the question, he leaves it for the readers to answer it on the basis of their beliefs, cultures and values. Another question that the story seems to raise is — Should we, like Roger Skunk's mother believe in accepting ourselves as nature has made us without being unduly bothered about what others would think of us.

On the Face of It

About the Author

Susan Hill is an English author of fiction and nonfiction works. Her novels include the 'woman in black', 'The mist in the mirror' and 'I'm the king of the castle' for which she received the Somerset Maugham award in 1971.

Introduction

The story is about a teenage boy, Derry, who has a burnt face and Mr. Lamb who is a disabled old man with an artificial leg made of tin. Derry accidentally enters his garden so that he can hide himself from people who hate him because of his ugly face. Mr. Lamb not only welcomes him in his garden but also encourages him to lead a normal life, leaving behind his past.

Summary

On the Face of It by Susan Hill is a socio-psychological story of two invalids who live with two different views. Derry is a young boy who lived a miserable life since a bottle of acid deformed his face and Mr. Lamb, a lame old man who lived a cheerful life even after he had lost one of his legs in a blast. The interesting thing is that Mr. Lamb himself was not very much of a happy man although he appeared to be ('on the face of it' = outwardly). It is a story about how one is able to fight a deformity happily. A story that tells about the triumph of optimism, Mr. Lamb and Derry will definitely inspire you Welcome to Mr. lamb's Garden!

Derry

Derry was a teenager, highly pessimistic (feeling low/feeling negative) and withdrawn (staying away) from the society. He developed this attitude after one side of his face was disfigured by acid. He avoided company of others and remained lonely. He believed that no one loved him, and his mother loved him because she was supposed to. One day Derry accidentally met a man called Mr. Lamb. Mr. Lamb was an old man with a lame leg.

While Mr. Lamb took his impairment as a challenge and tried to overcome it, Derry believed that he was unwanted and lost. His pain was physical and mental. Being a child, he was not as strong as Mr. Lamb about suffering. He could not take the sneering and sympathizing world as taken by Mr. Lamb. Mr. Lamb was able to sit smart and unaffected as long as he wore trousers and sat but Derry had no way to hide his face.

Mr. Lamb

After he became lame, Mr. Lamb began to develop a positive attitude with his deformity. He worked hard to defeat this impairment and learnt to walk and climb ladders. He was happy to be alive and ignored his lameness. He made everyone his friend and had a house with no curtains and open doors. He welcomed anyone who came to him.

Two Invalids

Both Mr. Lamb and Derry had much to suffer yet Derry was the worst affected.

Mr. Lamb was an old man who had lost one of his legs in a blast while Derry was a teenager with a burnt face. While Mr. Lamb took his impairment as a challenge and tried to overcome it, Derry believed that he was unwanted and lost. His pain was physical and mental. Being a child, he was not as strong as Mr. Lamb about suffering. He could not take the sneering and sympathizing world as taken by Mr. Lamb. Mr. Lamb was able to sit smart and unaffected as long as he wore trousers and sat but Derry had no way to hide his face.

Social Influence on Derry

Well, Derry cannot be completely blamed for his pessimistic and aggressive attitude towards the world around him.

- Once he heard two women commenting about his monstrous appearance. They said only a mother could love a face like his.
- On another occasion Derry heard his parents conversing that he would not survive after their death because he was deformed. The shock he received from these words was big.
- Once again Derry heard his relatives saying that his being put in the hospital where he had been treated after the accident was good for him. In their opinion a deformed boy like Derry could accommodate himself with other deformed boys and girls.

Derry had his ears always open for such comments and used to respond to them in his silent way. He concluded that the world altogether did not need a boy like him.

The Real

Lamb

Mr. Lamb claimed to have a lot of friends but in fact he appears to have few. Mr. Lamb is a peculiar person with no complaints about his deformity, but his heavy, philosophical talks may bore people who run into him. Even though Mr. Lamb had claimed he had hundreds of friends, he did not know of those names and no one showed up while Derry was with him for such a long time. Moreover, Mr. Lamb himself is found telling his bees that human beings do not keep their promise of returning to his garden. From all this one can conclude that Mr. Lamb had no friends but the bees and the nature around him.

Derry and his Mother

After meeting Mr. Lamb, Derry realized how foolish he had been to believe his parents. For him Lamb was a man who opened the doors of his closed world. At the end Derry goes back to his house where his mother cross questioned him. She had instructed him not to go to Mr. Lamb's garden. Derry tried to convince his mother that Mr. Lamb was an extremely good man, but she was not ready to listen. Ignoring his mother's thoughtless restrictions, Derry left his home and ran to Mr. Lamb's garden.

Back Again!

On reaching, Derry found a motionless Mr. Lamb fallen from the ladder. He had fallen while pulling the crab apples down from the tree. Was Mr. Lamb dead, we do not know for sure.

Notes-

The play "On the Face Of it" depicts beautifully yet grimly the sad world of the physically impaired. It is not the actual pain or inconvenience caused by a physical impairment that trouble a disabled man but the attitude of the people around him. Two physically impaired people, Mr. Lamb with a tin leg and Derry with a burnt face, strike a band of friendship.

Derek, a young lad of fourteen was sinking in the abyss of despair and frustration. He disliked everyone. Once he enters a garden thinking it an empty place but Finds an old man Mr. Lamb minding the apples. Derek feels embarrassed and wants to go back. Mr. Lamb assures him that he does not mind strangers and the gates of garden are open for everyone. Derek has low self-esteem and thinks people are afraid of him for his burnt face because of acid and thinks even his mother kisses him only on the good side of his face. He has bitterness for the world.

Mr. Lamb has a friendly and positive attitude. He tells Derek that he too is handicapped and loves all creatures made by God because nothing in this world is worthless, even weeds have their own value. He advises Derek to think of the beautiful objects of the world and never believe on your eyes but to believe your ears. Avoid people's comments and love all mankind because hatred corrodes us and hurts more than acids. He considers Derek to be his friend.

Mr. Lamb tells a story to give Derek a lesson. Once there was a timid man who refused to come out in fear of fatal accident. In his own room a picture fell of the wall on his head and he died. This changes Derek's attitude and he takes interest in Mr. Lamb's talking and likes to listen more to Mr. Lamb and wants to help Mr. Lamb in his work.

Derek wants to go home and inform his mother that he would be late. He promises to come back. His mother stops him, but he is adamant saying if he does not go now it would be never. When he comes back, he sees lamb lying on the ground. It is ironical that when he searches a new foothold to live happily, he finds Mr. Lamb dead. In this way, the play depicts the heart rendering life of physically disabled people with their loneliness, aloofness, and alienation. But at the same time, it is almost a true account of the people who do not let a person live happily.

Reading with Insight

Question 1. What is it that draws Derry to Mr. Lamb in spite of himself?

Answer: Mr. Lamb was not scared of Derry's burnt face. He wanted to be in his company and talk to him. Mr. Lamb was also handicapped and alone. He spoke in a friendly manner to Derry and inspired him to think positively. Thus, Derry got drawn to Mr. Lamb.

Question 2. The actual pain or inconvenience caused by a physical impairment is often much less than the sense of alienation felt by the person with disabilities. What is the kind of behaviour that the person expects from others?

Answer: The sense of alienation caused by physical impairment is no doubt more painful than the inconvenience caused by physical impairment. This is clearly proved in the play 'On the Face of It'. Derry seems to be a living example of this fact. He got his face burnt due to spilling of acid leaving scars and infirmity. The attitude of the people towards him gave him more pain than his physical pain. He was deeply hurt and disgusted when he realised that his family was anxious about his future. He felt pain when he overheard two women talking about his ugly face. The insensitive remarks of the women in which they suggest him to be in the company of people like him, developed a sense of alienation in him. He closed himself in a shell and developed a very negative attitude to society and finally to life.

Question 3. Will Derry get back to his old seclusion or will Mr. Lamb's brief association effect a change in the kind of life he will lead in future?

Answer: Derry had received a lot of positivity from Mr. Lamb, who encouraged him to live his life on his own terms. He had motivated him so much that he had come out of his inferiority complex. So, he would not get back to his seclusion.

Short Questions and Answers

Question 1. How does Mr. Lamb keep himself busy when it is a bit cool?

Answer: When the weather was cool, Mr. Lamb would take a ladder and a stick and pull down the crab apples. He would make jelly with the ripened oranges and golden apples to keep himself occupied.

Question 2. As told by Mr. Lamb, why did a man lock himself up in his room and what happened to him?

Answer: The man locked himself up in his room because he was afraid that a bus might run him over or a man might breathe deadly germs onto him, or a donkey might kick him to death or lightning might strike him down or he might slip on a banana skin and fall and people would laugh at him. But despite locking himself in the room, he died as a picture fell off the wall on his head.

Question 3. If you were to give a different ending to the story 'On the Face of It' how would you end it?

Answer: I would have given a happy ending to the story. I would not like Mr. Lamb to die at the end. Instead Derry would be received by Mr. Lamb and they both would become good friends.

Question 4. How does Derry interpret the fairy tale 'Beauty and the Beast'? What does he feel about himself?

Answer: Derry says Beauty loved the Beast and so she kissed him, and he changed into a handsome prince. But this would not happen to him because no one was going to kiss him. Even his mother kissed him on the other side of the face.

Question 5. Why did Mr. Lamb help Derry?

Answer: Mr. Lamb himself was handicapped. He knew the difficulties faced by people like him. But he was very optimistic and wanted to motivate and inspire others. He wanted Derry to look at the things from a different perspective. It was his nature of generosity, love and altruism that compelled him to help Derry.

Question 6. In what sense is the friendship between Mr. Lamb and Derry fruitful?

Answer: For Derry, his friendship with Mr. Lamb proved very fruitful. Mr. Lamb changed Derry's attitude to life and gave him courage to face the challenges of life bravely. His way of living a life to its utmost productivity proved to be an inspiration for Derry who finally came out of his inferiority complex and started living a normal life.

Question 7. Why does Derry's mother not want him to go back to visit Mr. Lamb?

Answer: Derry's mother claims to have heard many things about Mr. Lamb. She has been told and warned by the people. She thinks he is not a good person. She asks Derry not to go back there. Derry asks her not to believe all she hears. But Derry is determined to go there.

Question 8. How does Mr. Lamb react when Derry enters his garden?

Answer: Mr. Lamb introduces himself and tries to make a very casual conversation, cautions Derry about the fallen fruit so that he does not trip on it and tries to comfort him putting his doubts at rest.

Question 9. What kind of garden does Mr. Lamb have? Why does he like it?

Answer: Mr. Lamb has an orchard full of fruit trees. He likes it because gardening keeps him busy and children also come there to play. He longs for human company as he suffers from loneliness.

Question 10. How do people react to Derry's face?

Answer: Derry was a fourteen-year-old boy who had a scarred face. People were afraid of him and stared at him because he had an ugly burnt face. They pretended to be sympathetic but actually the attitude of the people, reflected the callousness of the society towards the physically impaired.

Question 11. How do people console Derry when they look at his face?

Answer: When people looked at Derry's face, some people were sympathetic, and some were not. People told him inspiring stories to console him but not one ever kissed him except his mother. Lamb clarified to Derry that people with the same deformity were also different. It is incorrect to judge people by what they look like.

Question 12. Why does Derry tell Mr. Lamb that he is afraid of seeing himself in the mirror?

Answer: Half of the face of Derry was burnt due to spilling of acid. This left an ugly scar on his face. He was afraid of seeing his ugly face in the mirror as it reminded him of his ugliness and made him feel scared and depressed.

Question 13. According to Derry, what did people think and say about him?

Answer: The half of Derry's face was burnt and disfigured due to spilling of acid. People either ignored him or had pitied him. Some even made fun of him and called him ugly and the devil. They were scared of him.

Question 14. What did Derry's mother think of Mr. Lamb?

Answer: Derry's mother did not have a good opinion about Mr. Lamb as she had heard many things about him. She did not want Derry to go and meet him. She believed Mr. Lamb to be a dangerous person who lived alone in a big home.

Question 15. What qualities of Mr. Lamb attracted Derry to him?

Answer: Mr. Lamb's positive attitude attracted Derry to him. He always looked at life in a positive and realistic way. He was motivating and inspiring. His zeal to live life fully in all circumstances, brought Derry closer to him.

Question 16. Why does Mr. Lamb leave his gate open?

Answer: Mr. Lamb was always on the lookout for the company of good friends. That is why he kept his gate open. He wanted people to come and meet him any time. This is symbolic of his openness to accept the world.

Question 17. Which peculiar things does Derry notice about Mr. Lamb?

Answer: Mr. Lamb appeared to be a peculiar person to Derry because he was not able to understand many of the things which Mr. Lamb said. Mr. Lamb told Derry to keep his ears shut and ignore what the people said. His positive approach to life, in spite of his handicap, was a peculiar thing for Derry.

Question 18. "It ate my face up. It ate me up," says Derry to Mr. Lamb. What is this a reference to and how does the play bear out the later part of the statement?

Answer: Derry's face is scarred and disfigured due to spilling of acid. He is pitied by others. In fact, the acid ate up his face. It also disfigured his personality. This led him to self-pity. He was not able to face the people and their unkind and insensitive remarks.

Question 19. 'The world's got a whole face, and the world's there to be looked at.' How does this statement reflect Mr. Lamb's state of mind and how does this help in changing Derry's outlook to life?

Answer: This statement reflects Mr. Lamb's optimism and positive attitude to life. He believes that one must face life with positivity and accept everything courageously. The world is a beautiful place and we must enjoy its beauty by interacting with people. This positive attitude of Mr. Lamb changed Derry's state of mind and he was able to overcome his inferiority complex and low self-esteem.

Question 20. Despite all that the old man says, he is yet a lonely old man. How is this brought out in the course of the play? How does Mr. Lamb overcome this?

Answer: Mr. Lamb is an old man with a tin-leg. He is alone and lives in a big house with a big lawn. Though, he is very optimistic and accepts everything very positively, his loneliness is evident from the fact that he leaves his gate and windows open so that people can come in whenever they want. He overcomes this loneliness by getting himself involved in making toffees, jelly, etc. with the crab apples that grow in his garden. He loves to talk and spend time with the children who come to his lawn.

Question 21. 'Because if I don't go back there, I'll never go back anywhere in the world' says Derry to his mother. How do these words reflect Derry's state of mind? How does he come to feel this way?

Answer: These words show that Derry's state of mind has changed. Motivated and inspired by Mr. Lamb, Derry has become confident and bold enough to accept and face the world in spite of his deformity. He is no more a pessimist and has started taking life as a challenge.

Long Questions and Answers

Question 1. How does Mr. Lamb's brief association with Derry affect the latter?

OR

How did Mr. Lamb's meeting with Derry become a turning point in his life?

Answer: Derry was a fourteen-year-old boy who had his one side of face burnt due to the spilling of acid. He was dejected. People pitied him. He was pained due to the horror, disgust, and the pity show for him by the alienated people. As a result, he had become bitter. He had withdrawn himself from people and had developed a pessimistic attitude to life.

When he met Mr. Lamb and spent some time in his company, his entire perspective changed. Mr. Lamb was a person, full of life. He told Derry to embrace life fully and not to be bothered about what people said about him. He advised him to keep his ears shut to what was unpleasant to hear but not to shut himself in. He inspired Derry by keeping himself busy in spite of his tin-leg and by being open and cheerful.

Mr. Lamb's advice proved to be a great motivation for Derry, and he came out from his shell of isolation. Thus, it proved to be a turning point in his life.

Question 2. What is the bond that united the two—the old man, Mr. Lamb, and Derry, the small boy?

Answer: Derry is a small boy who has a burnt face due spilling of acid. He is very withdrawn and defiant. He runs away from the world as he hates others staring at him. He thinks people are afraid of his deformity. Similarly, Mr. Lamb, too is a handicapped person. He lost one leg in a bomb explosion during the war years ago. He lives alone.

The two of them have deformity and are rejected by the people. Both have a vacuum in their hearts for not having company. Mr. Lamb is a man full of positive energy. When Derry meets him, he finds himself drawn to him. Mr. Lamb seems to be the only one who gives him a new line of thought about his physical disfigurement.

Thus, they both shared a bond that unites the two of them.

Question 3. What benefits did Derry reap from his association with Mr. Lamb?

Answer: Derry was a fourteen-year-old boy whose face was partly burnt due to spilling of acid. As a result, he became conscious of his ugly face. He found that people either ridiculed him or pitied him. He developed a negative attitude to life. He became frustrated. But when he met Mr. Lamb, he got inspiration from him to live life as it came. Derry was encouraged by Mr. Lamb to look at the world and to take interest in things around him. He found truth, sense, and inspiration in Mr. Lamb's words. He learnt from Mr. Lamb to handle his handicap and loneliness.

In fact, it was Mr. Lamb who brought Derry back to life. Derry learnt the way to live life fully by dealing with his deformity in an appropriate manner.

Question 4. What was Derry's deformity? How had it made him withdrawn and defiant?

Answer: Derry was a fourteen-year-old boy. He had half of his face burnt due to spilling of acid. This made him look so ugly that everyone either pitied him or ridiculed him. This made him bitter. He detested the world and suffered from an inferiority complex, lack of self-respect and rejection.

Derry's deformity made him so frustrated that he evaded people. He came to Mr. Lamb's garden because he thought it to be empty. When he saw Mr. Lamb, he wanted to go away. He was extremely sensitive and even had a grudge against his mother for kissing him only on the other side of his burnt face.

Thus, due to his handicap, Derry became defiant and withdrawn. He was frustrated at his rejection by the people and became so withdrawn that he did not want to meet and talk to anyone.

Question 5. Justify the title 'On the Face of It'.

Answer: The title of the story 'On the Face of It' seems to be very appropriate. The idiom 'On the Face of It' means from appearance alone or apparently. In the play, Derry is frustrated and has lost self-esteem due to people's attitude to him. Everyone thought that his burnt face was terrible, and he was handicapped. Similar was Mr. Lamb's case. He had lost one leg in a bomb explosion. Apparently both Mr. Lamb and Derry had deformities. But Mr. Lamb enabled Derry to have faith in himself and look at the bright side of things and to learn to live with his deformity.

Their physical handicap was an apparent thing for them as well as for the world. But the most significant thing is the strength of one's soul. Mr. Lamb was a mentally strong person who handled his own handicap and loneliness very effectively. He became instrumental in Derry change his views about himself and his deformity and start taking things positively. The play deals with the acceptance of the fact that things are not always as they appear, i.e. physical handicap has nothing to do with the mental strength and positive attitude to life.

Question 6. How do Mr. Lamb and Derry differ in their thoughts, traits, and attitude to life?

OR

Both Derry and Mr. Lamb suffer from handicaps, yet their attitude to life is totally different. Discuss.

Answer: Mr. Lamb and Derry both are handicapped. Mr. Lamb has lost his leg in a bomb explosion and Derry has a deformed face due to spilling of acid. They differ in their thoughts, traits, and attitude to life. Derry is not able to cope with his disfigured face and people's uncharitable remarks. As a result, he keeps himself withdrawn and isolated from the world and has a very negative attitude to life. Derry keeps to himself and is extremely sensitive. He cannot stand people staring at him. On the other hand, Mr. Lamb is not much affected by his handicap. He enjoys reading books, tending plants and flowers. He has a positive attitude to life and accepts everything as it comes. He is open-minded and welcomes people. He is not affected when children call him 'Lamey Lamb'.

Thus, both Derry and Mr. Lamb are in contrast to each other. Finally, Mr. Lamb was able to inspire Derry and change his attitude to life.

Question 7. What kind of atmosphere is created by Mr. Lamb to look welcoming and invite people to him?

Answer: Mr. Lamb has a very positive attitude to life. He keeps the door of his home open to welcome people into his house. He always speaks in a positive manner. Many children come to his garden to steal apples. He never rebukes them but wants to talk and spend time with them to overlook the mischiefs of others. He never gets annoyed or disturbed over the comments of children who call him 'Lamey Lamb'. He accepts life as it comes to him.

He never puts curtains on his windows and makes toffees and jelly for others. As a lonely man, Mr. Lamb wants to have company. He never discloses his loneliness to anybody and always speaks encouraging words. It is due to the welcoming attitude of Mr. Lamb that Derry promised to return to his garden.

Question 8. Both Derry and Lamb are physically impaired and lonely. It is the responsibility of society to understand and support people with infirmities so that they do not suffer from a sense of alienation. As a responsible citizen, write in 120-150 words what you would do to bring about a change in the lives of such people.

Answer: Both Derry and Lamb are physically impaired and lonely. It is only due to the insensitive attitude of the society that they feel alienated and lonely. Derry, a boy of fourteen years, always gets either pitied or have uncharitable remarks made against by others and Mr. Lamb seeks to get some company. In fact, as educated members of society, we need to come forward to make these people realise that they are also wanted and are significant for us. We have to change our attitude to such people and realise that just one deformity cannot affect the other talents and capabilities of a person. Actually, these people are very sensitive and feel dejected. We have to give them love and comfort and show our faith in them by providing them with equal opportunities and responsibilities.

Question 9. 'Inclusive education' is a step to bring the people with deformities into the mainstream so as to build up their confidence and morale. Write a paragraph on 'The Importance of Inclusive Education'.

Answer:

The Importance of Inclusive Education

Inclusive education is a step to bring the people with deformities into the mainstream. It is a step to imbibe confidence in those with deformities. In fact, one handicap cannot destroy the other qualities of a person. It is time we understood that persons with deformities are not outcasts. They are one of us and we need to accept them.

Inclusive education enhances the self-esteem of such people and provides an environment where they can grow into a complete human being and feel confident and independent. This is possible only when these people are accepted, and not pitied. Inclusive education is an effective way of giving shape to this idea.

Characters

1. James Roderick Evans: a prisoner
2. Secretary of the Examination Board: a higher official of the examination board
3. Governor: the governor of H.M. Prison, Oxford.
4. Mr. Jackson: a prison officer
5. Mr. Stephens: a prison officer
6. Reverend Stuart McLeery: an invigilator
7. Mr. Carter: a detective superintendent
8. Mr. Bell: a detective chief inspector

Theme

This story depicts a clash of wit between a criminal and the law enforcing authorities in which the prisoner Evans befools the jail authorities and manages to escape from the prison. If the government and law enforcing officials are vigilant, crime can be detected, and criminals can be booked. But criminals like Evans can hoodwink the authorities and escape punishment as long as the officials are slow and lack alertness and wit.

Summary

In March, the Secretary of the Examinations Board receives a call from the Governor at Oxford Prison, asking if one of his prisoners can take the final exam in O-level German. James Roderick Evans is a jovial, “congenital kleptomaniac” who’s escaped from various prisons three times, though the Governor is determined to not let that happen at Oxford Prison. The Governor and the Secretary decide that Evans will take the test in his own cell, and that they’ll get a parson to be the proctor.

At 8:45 A.M. one morning in June, Reverend Stuart McLeery makes his way to Oxford Prison, where he’s scheduled to proctor a two-hour exam at 9:15 A.M. When McLeery arrives, the senior prison officer, Jackson, searches his briefcase. The officer is baffled by a strange, partially inflated rubber ring that looks like a child’s pool toy; McLeery irritably explains that it’s a special cushion he sits on because of his haemorrhoid problem. Embarrassed, Jackson apologizes and sends the proctor back to Evans’s cell. After a few more hiccups, the exam finally begins at 9:25 A.M.

The Examinations Board calls the Governor; the Assistant Secretary with a “special responsibility for modern languages” explains that “some fool” forgot to include a correction slip in the envelope with the other exam materials. The Governor wonders if the call is a fake but tells himself he’s being silly. Since Evans’s cell has been bugged, the Governor listens in as McLeery reads out the corrections to Evans. Meanwhile, Stephens peers into the peephole of Evans’s cell every few minutes. At one point, he’s surprised to see a blanket draped over Evans’s shoulders. Stephens wonders if this is the kind of “slight irregularity” he should report, but reasons that it is cold in the prison.

At 11:20 A.M., McLeery informs Evans that there are only five minutes remaining. Two minutes later, Jackson receives a call from the Governor asking for Stephens: Stephens is to escort McLeery out of the prison when the exam is over. When Stephens escorts the man out, he observes that the minister’s Scottish accent seems “broader than ever,” and that he seems thinner than before. Once McLeery is gone, Stephens returns to Evans’s cell—there is McLeery, sprawled out and covered in blood.

Chaos ensues, and the Governor arrives on the scene. McLeery feebly thrusts the German exam into his hand; there, on the last page of the exam, is a “cleverly superimposed” photocopied sheet instructing Evans about how to escape. After having Detective Superintendent Carter taken McLeery to the hospital, the Governor berates Stephens for ignorantly letting the criminal go free, but he stutters that he was only following the Governor’s orders. The Governor screams that he never gave Stephen those orders—the call was a fake. The Governor calls the hospital to check up on McLeery, but the hospital says they don't have any patients named McLeery. Suddenly, the Governor realizes his mistake: "It had not been Evans, impersonating McLeery, who had walked out; it had been Evans, impersonating McLeery, who had stayed in." Fifteen minutes later, they find the real McLeery gagged and bound at his flat.

After a pleasant dinner, Evans returns to the Golden Lion Hotel. He thinks about how the fake McLeery had worn two of everything (two clerical shirts, two clerical collars, two coats), and Evans had managed to wiggle into his disguise underneath the grey blanket. Evans enters his room and instantly freezes there, sitting on the bed, is the Governor. Realizing he can't escape; Evans begins telling the Governor about his scheme. He explains that the most pivotal part was the fake call to Stephens in the last three minutes of the exam, which gave Evans and McLeery time to use the pig's blood, which was concealed in McLeery's inflatable rubber ring.

A silent prison officer handcuffs Evans and loads him into a prison van. Evans asks if the Governor knows any other modern languages—he noticed that the prison was offering O-level Italian in September. The Governor says that Evans might not be at Oxford Prison come September; Evans agrees that the Governor might be right. The Governor watches the van pull away. When the van reaches the main road, the silent prison officer hurriedly unlocks Evans' handcuffs and snaps at the driver to drive faster, as "It won't take 'em long to find out." In a thick Scottish accent, the driver asks where they should "make for," and Evans suggests Newbury.

GIST OF THE LESSON

- Evans a kleptomaniac was imprisoned thrice, and all the time escaped from the prison. Now he was in the prison for the 4th time and all of a sudden developed curiosity to appear in O-level German Examination which also was an effort to break the prison.
- The Governor takes utmost care to see that he would not be fooled. Every care was taken to make Evans prepare for the exam.
- He was tutored by a German tutor for 6 months. The day before the exam the tutor wishes good luck but makes it clear that he had hardly any 'chance of getting through.' But Evans gives an ironical twist to the tutor's observation by saying "I may surprise everybody."
- On the day of the exam Jackson and Stephens visited Evans cell and took away everything that may help him injure himself. Evans was insisted to take away the hat, but he refused saying that it was lucky charm.

- Evans cell was bugged so that the Governor could himself listen to each and every conversation in the cell. The invigilator Rev. S. McLeery too was searched and left him to complete the task. Stephen sitting outside the cell every now and then peeped into the cell.
- The exam went on smoothly. Stephen escorted the invigilator to the main gate and took a look into Evans cell and found the invigilator (actually Evans) wounded, informed the Governor. The latter was to be hospitalized but informed that he was alright and asked them to follow Evans. Thus, he escaped the prison.
- When the invigilator was not found in the hospital, they went to the residence of Rev. S. McLeery only to find him 'bound and gagged in his study in Broad Street'. He has been there, since 8.15 a.m. Now everything was clear to the Governor.
- Evan escaped the prison the 4th time. But by taking the hint from the question paper the Governor reached the hotel where Evans was and captured him and came to know how he planned his escape and said that his game was over. Evans surrenders himself to the Governor.
- The Governor tells Evan they would meet soon.
- The moment they are rid of the Governor, the so-called prison officer—a friend of Evans unlocks the handcuffs and asks the driver to move fast and Evans tells him to turn to Newbury.

Textual Questions and Answers

Read-and-find-out Questions

Question 1. What kind of a person was Evans?

Answer: Evans was a congenital kleptomaniac and was in Oxford Prison. He was an expert at escaping from prisons and was called 'Evans the Break'. He was a genius at planning and foresight. He was very clever and had many friends and contacts who helped him to escape. He was a very good actor too, as nobody doubted him when he was acting as McLeery.

Question 2. What were the precautions taken for the smooth conduct of the examination?

Answer: Evans was famous for escaping from prisons. So, all possible precautions were taken for the smooth conduct of the examination. The Governor himself supervised all the precautions. Senior officer Jackson and officer Stephens were very vigilant and worked round the clock. All the sharp things, including the nail cutter, razor, etc. were removed from the cell of Evans. His cell was bugged to hear the communication between him and the invigilator. A vigil was kept on his cell during the course of the examination.

Question 3. Did the Governor and his staff finally heave a sigh of relief?

Answer: The governor and his staff couldn't heave a sigh of relief because immediately after the exam was over, they found the invigilator lying bleeding in Evans's cell. It appeared that Evans had hurt him and escaped from the prison in the guise of McLeery.

Question 4. Where did Evans go?

Answer: Evans went to Chipping Norton and after a stroll around the centre of Chipping Norton he returned to Golden Lion hotel.

Reading with Insight

Question 1. Reflecting upon the story, what do you feel about Evans having the last laugh?

Answer: Evans is a genius and a master in planning his escapes. He uses all tactics-psychology, emotional display, great acting skills, convincing powers, and amiability—to carry out his plan. The governor, despite being overcautious, is not able to prevent his escape. However, after a lot of efforts he is able to trace and capture Evans, arrest him and send him to the prison house. But at this point also, he is outsmarted by Evans. In fact, the prison officials are no one else but his friends in disguise. Once again Evans escapes due to the carelessness of the Governor. He has the last laugh.

Question 2. When Stephens comes back to the cell he jumps to a conclusion and the whole machinery blindly goes by his assumption without even checking the identity of the injured 'McLeery'. Does this show how hasty conjectures can prevent one from seeing the obvious? How is the criminal able to predict such negligence?

Answer: When Stephens comes back to the cell, he finds a man covered with blood in Evans' cell. He jumps to the conclusion and does not bother to check the identity of the injured McLeery. Definitely it was a hasty conjecture on his part which prevented him from seeing the obvious. If he had identified McLeery then and there, Evans would have been caught as this man was no one but Evans himself. Evans is able to predict such negligence because he understood the psychology of the officer. Evans was smart and very observant.

Question 3. What could have the Governor done to securely bring back Evans to prison when he caught him at Golden Lion? Does that final act of foolishness really prove that ‘he was just another good-for-a-giggle, gullible governor, that was all’?

Answer: The Governor, despite being aware of the fact that Evans was very clever, did not make any fool proof arrangements to bring him back. He could have called the prison force instead of police to take Evans back to the prison house. He should have made more elaborate security arrangements. He could have cross-checked the identity of the officers who took Evans away or he would have personally escorted Evans back to jail.

Short Answer type questions

Question 1: How did the Governor, Oxford Prison describe Evans to the Secretary, Examination Board?

Answer: The Governor described Evans as a pleasant sort of person who was good at imitating people to the Secretary, Examination Board. He also mentioned that he was a congenital kleptomaniac and had no record of violence.

Question 2: What was the German teacher’s opinion of Evan’s proficiency in German?

Answer: Evans’ German teacher had a very low opinion of his proficiency in German. He thought that Evans had a very little chance of clearing the O-level Exam.

Question 3: What could the Governor have done to securely bring Evans back to the prison from the ‘Golden Lion’?

Answer : The Governor should have travelled himself in the van with Evans and in case he was unable to do so, he should have checked the credentials of the guards escorting Evans to securely bring Evans back to the prison from the ‘Golden Lion’.

Question 4: What important call did the Governor receive when the examination was going on?

Answer: The important call that the Governor received when the examination was going on was from the magistrate court. He was asked to provide a prison van a couple of prison officers for a remand case.

Question 5: What precautions were taken for the smooth conduct of Evans' O-level examination?

Answer: Thoroughly checking Evans' prison cell a night before the exam, removing of all sharp objects from his cell, frisking of the invigilator and checking his suitcase were the precautions taken for the smooth conduct of Evans' O-level examination.

Question 6: What kind of person was Evans? Why did he want to sit for the O-level German examination?

Answer: Evans seemed to be quiet a pleasant and astute person. He was a kleptomaniac and had managed to escape the prison thrice. His desire to sit for the O-level German examination was only a plot to foci the authorities and escape the prison.

Question 7: How do we know that Evans had no chance of getting through the O-level German examination? Why did he take the test?

Answer: We know that Evans had no chance of getting through the O-level German examination as his instructor had commented that he hardly had any chance of getting through the exam.

Question 8: On the day of the examination, with what excuse did Evans keep Stephens out of his cell? What was the actual reason?

Answer: Evans gave the excuse of being unable to concentrate on is exam if Stephens was sitting behind him.

The actual reason was to get Stephens out of the cell so that he could make arrangements for his escape.

Question 9: What are the contents of the small suitcase that McLeery carried?

Answer: The suitcase that McLeery carried had a sealed question paper envelope, a yellow invigilation form, a special authentication card from the Examination Board, a paper knife, a Bible, the current copy of Church Times and a small semi-inflated rubber ring.

Question 10: What did the Detective Superintendent inform the Governor about Evans?

Answer: The Detective Superintendent informed the Governor that McLeery had spotted Evans in a car and had taken down the car's number. They tried to chase the car but lost it after some time.

Question 11: How did the Governor find out where Evans was?

Answer: The Governor thought about the six-digit reference number and after putting the two numbers, the index and the centre number together and with the help of the 'Ordinance Survey Map for Oxfordshire' he reached the hotel to find Evans.

Question 12: Who was Carter? What did the Governor ask him to do?

Answer: Carter was the Detective Superintendent. The Governor had asked him to take Evans, who was disguised as injured McLeery, along considering that he knew where Evans could be.

Question 13: How did the Governor react to the two phone calls he received in quick succession?

Answer: The Governor had a sharp presence of mind and wanted to give Evans no chance to escape. So, he verified the first phone call he received. However, he did not do so with the second call as he thought he was being paranoid.

Question 14: How did the question paper and the correction slip help the prisoner and the Governor?

Answer: The purpose of the cleverly superimposed photocopied sheet on the question paper and the correction slip was to finalise the details of Evans' plan of escape. It also helped the Governor to locate the place where Evans was hiding.

Question 15: Why did Evans not take off his hat when Jackson ordered him to do so?

Answer: Evans knew that the duplicate McLeery, who was to invigilate during the O-level German examination, had short hair. So, he cropped his hair to pass off as McLeery later and wore a hat on exam day. Hence, he did not take off his hat when Jackson told him to do so.

Question 16: How does McLeery explain the presence of a small semi-inflated rubber ring? What did it actually contain?

Answer: McLeery tells Jackson that he is suffering from haemorrhoids (piles) and the ring helps him when he has to sit for a long time. In reality, the ring contained pig blood, which Evans would splatter on his head and escape from the hospital as McLeery who had been injured.

Question 17: What clues did the answer sheet of Evans provide to the Governor?

Answer: The index number 313 and the centre number 271 on the answer sheet proved to be the clues for the Governor. Putting the two together and with the help of the Ordinance Survey Map for Oxfordshire, he managed to catch Evans in the hotel.

Question 18: How did Evans outwit the Governor in the end?

Answer: Evans outwitted the Governor in the end by escaping again. This was due to the fact that he knew the prison officer who handcuffed him and the driver who was driving the van.

Question 19: Who do you think has outwitted the other-Evans or the Governor? How?

Answer: Evans had outwitted the Governor in the end. This was because he was able to escape again after being caught by the Governor at the hotel.

Long Questions

Question 1: Describe the precautions taken by the prison officers to prevent Evans from escaping.

Answer: As Evans had tried to escape before, the prison authorities had taken all possible precautions for the smooth conduct of the examination. Evans' cell was thoroughly checked a night before and all sharp-edged objects like razor, nail-file, scissors, etc. were taken away from him. The suitcase of the invigilator, McLeery, was carefully checked before he entered the cell. Also, the Governor had himself decided to supervise the examination by listening in through the microphone connected to Evans' cell. Prison officer Stephens was deployed to observe Evans from the peephole every minute or so. Another prison officer Mr Jackson was in constant contact with the Governor on the phone. Both the gates of the wings of Evans' cell were locked tightly. Thus, the authorities left no stone unturned in ensuring the smooth and safe conduct of the examination.

Question 2: How did the negligence of the prison officers prove to be a boon for Evans?

Answer: The prison authorities had taken multi-step detailed precautions for the safe conduct of the examination. However, some lapses on their part at critical moments proved to be a boon for Evans.

First of all, one tried to verify the identity of the invigilator McLeery and that turned out to be a key mistake in this case. Similarly, the identities of the van driver and the officer who handcuffed Evans were not verified. All of them later turned out to be Evans' accomplices.

The Detective Superintendent also acted hastily and did not drive the injured McLeery to the hospital.

This gave Evans the chance to escape. Finally, the Governor, who had a sharp presence of mind and hawk-eyed vigil, made the greatest blunder. When he nabbed Evans at the hotel, he did not bring him to the jail with him and sent him with a driver and a prison officer. Thus, Evans escaped yet again.

Question 3: Give a character sketch of the Governor of Oxford Prison based on your understanding of the story, 'Evans Tries an O-level'.

Answer: The Governor of the HM Prison, Oxford, appears to be a kind-hearted fellow at the start as he arranges for an O-level exam for a prisoner renowned for his ability to escape. He was, though, quite sceptical of Evans and made every arrangement to make sure that Evans had no means to escape.

He was also very proud and self-conscious. He did not want Evans to disgrace him by escaping from his prison. He had a sharp presence of mind, which was clear from the fact that he cross checked every call that was made to the prison that day.

However, he got over-confident of his arrangements and gave Evans the opportunity to escape.

Also, he was a person who did not mind showering praise on a prisoner. When Evans revealed his secret plan to him, he admired him. At last, he proved to be just another gullible Governor when Evans tricked him again and successfully escaped. His overconfidence and self-praise let him down.

Question 4: How was the injured McLeery able to befool the prison officers?

Answer: Evans acted really well as the 'injured' McLeery. The fake blood that was supplied to him by his invigilator friend was pouring down from his head. With a 'feeble' hand, he got his handkerchief and held it to his bleeding head. In fact, in that process, he was able to hide his face from the eyes of the prison officer. He was in so much pain that he could hardly utter a coherent word! In this way, he concealed his voice and was able to dodge the officers.

The moment he heard the suggestion of bringing in an ambulance, he interrupted and asked them to call the police; he offered them his help in tracing Evans whom the authorities thought had escaped. This was a part of his plan in which all the officers got trapped.

Evans acting as the injured McLeery fooled all the officers and hence he got successful in making them believe that the injured invigilator was really trying to help them. Thus, by his superb acting of an injured person, he was completely successful in befooling and confusing the prison officers.

Question 5: What purpose did the question paper and the correction slip serve? How did they help both the criminals and the Governor?

Answer: The purpose of the photocopied sheet that was superimposed on the question paper and the correction slip was to supply the details of the plan of escape to Evans without uttering a single word. It was a well-thought out meticulous plan. It was also meant to make the authorities believe that the wounded man was McLeery himself. And at that moment, it worked as was thought and the authorities got trapped.

However, there is a wise saying 'iron cuts iron'. Just like that, if that superimposed question paper and correction slip helped Evans, then the same also helped the Governor in locating the place where Evans was hiding.

The six-digit number of the correction slip i.e., the index number and the centre number 313/271, helped the Governor. He put these numbers together and with the help of the Ordnance Survey Map of Oxfordshire reached the hotel where Evans had decided to hide for the day.

Question 6: In spite of the precautions taken by the Governor, Evans was able to escape. How do you think he was able to do it?

Answer: Evans, the habitual jail-breaker outwits everyone and in spite of all the precautions taken by the Governor he is able to escape from prison. From the very beginning when the German teacher enters the prison to the last encounter between the Governor and Evans in the hotel, the latter outsmarts them at each stage and proves that they are no match for his crafty scheming. Evans carries out all his plans 'right under their noses', turning tables on them, making the prison authorities appear as 'good for nothing' officers.

For example, he knew that Mr Jackson who used a rough tone had some compassion for him. He granted Evans' request to keep the filthy looked red and white bobble hat on his head during the examination. The hat was actually to hide his recently cropped hair. Also, he knew that prison officers will blindly go by assumption. He pretended to pose as 'injured' McLeery in the cell. No one checked the identity of 'injured' McLeery as it was assumed that Evans had hit McLeery and escaped.

In fact, Evans is actually, officially escorted out of jail by the prison officials themselves. Finally, at the hotel, when the Governor feels that he has been able to nab Evans, he dodges him and slips away.

Value Based Question

Question 1: When Stephen comes back to the cell he jumps to a conclusion and the whole machinery blindly goes by his assumption without even checking the identity of the injured 'McLeery'. Does this show how hasty conjectures can prevent one from seeing the obvious? How is the criminal able to predict such negligence?

Answer: Evans has assessed the weaknesses of the jail officers successfully. When he saw the injured McLeery in the cell he was so overwhelmed that he did not even check who he really was and neither did anyone else. It did not occur to anyone to question how there could be two persons – one in the cell and the other who had been escorted out by Stephens.

It was for this reason that friends of Evans, who posing as Governor on the phone, had directed Stephens that he himself should escort the person out when the exam finished. The Governor and his officers, in effect actually led Evans out of the prison. The question paper is left behind to further mislead the Governor. This shows that Evans planned his strategy after thoroughly understanding the behaviour of the prison officers.

Question 2: While we condemn the crime, we are sympathetic to the criminal. Is this the reason why prison staff often develop a soft corner for those in custody?

Answer: 'Crime' and 'criminals' are usually considered synonymous. However, our perception changes when we see a criminal suffering or serving his punishment. This happened with the prison staff also. Noticing a criminal suffering in the prison, they developed a soft corner for him. They looked at him as a human being and not as a mere criminal. They started noticing and appreciating his mental capabilities rather than remembering his crime.

In the story, Jackson lets Evans keep his hat on after being informed about it being lucky for Evans. Evans knew of the emotional side of Jackson and so hit it directly through his talk about 'lucky charm' and managed to fool the stern and practical officer. Even the Governor could not help noticing his intelligence when caught him in the hotel. Thus, he was not cruel or stern with Evans, and regrettably, took him leniently.
